ARABS STRIKE IN HOLY LAND; TERROR GROWS

3 Jews and Girl Held in Bombing of Bus.

JERUSALEM, July 8.—(AP)—A wave of Arab strikes spread through Palestine today, complicating the problem of British authorities endeavoring to crush an outbreak of Jewish-Arab guerrilla warfare. The outbreak began nine days ago after the hanging by British authorities of a Jewish terrorist who ambushed an Arab bus.

The spontaneous strike movement began after a bomb explosion at Jerusalem's Jaffa gate this morning in which four Arabs were killed and thirty-six wounded.

Three Jews and a schoolgirl, 12 years old, were arrested, after the explosion. Arab bystanders said the girl threw the bomb which tore apart a bus filled with Arab countryfolk. Authorities refused to disclose the girl's identity.

Jew Rescued from Mob.

The bomb shattered a nearby vegetable market. The blast created panic in the crowded roadway. The twisted framework of the bus was scattered about, bloodstained.

Troops of the Scottish Black Watch regiment cleared the square with fixed bayonets, while police rescued a Jew who was surrounded by an enraged mob of Arabs.

The blast brought the total casualties in nine days of terrorism to thirty-eight killed and 150 injured. Since the first of the year nearly 300 have been killed and hundreds wounded.

Strike Movement Spreads.

When news of the bombing spread Arabs went on strikes in numerous towns, including Acre, Nablus, Tulkarm, Jenin and Jaffa. In neighboring Transjordan, also under British mandate, workers struck at Amman in sympathy with the Palestine Arabs.

British authorities put into effect a curfew law in Jerusalem, Haifa, Jaffa and Tel Aviv. Inhabitants were forbidden to be on the streets from 6 p. m. to 5:30 a. m.

Police rounded up many revisionists—members of a Jewish organization demanding all of Palestine for Jews—in Haifa, Jerusalem, and Tel Aviv. They were interned in a concentration camp.

Two British police officers, ambushed near Jerusalem, said they had killed one of their attackers and described him as an Arab.

Guard American Tourists.

Thirty-five American tourists, most of them clergymen, who arrived this week from Marseilles, France, on the steamship Sphinx, continued a tour of the Holy Land under heavy police escort.

Another group of American tourists was due to arrive tomorrow on the American Export ship Exeter. Agents here said they believed a scheduled tour of Palestine would be canceled.

Britain massed armed forces to deal with the crisis. Warships, airplanes, marines, land troops and police were called to emergency duty.

Six hundred fully equipped marines and sailors were landed from the British cruiser Emerald which, with the cruiser Enterprise, rushed here under emergency orders. They were placed on duty in Haifa, where more than 100 persons were killed and wounded in a battle Wednesday. They probably will be relieved soon by contingents from the 32,000 ton battleship Repulse, which reached Haifa today.

Rush Troops from Egypt.

Two British rifle battalions, at least 1,600 men, rushed from Egypt to reënforce the 10,000 British soldiers, armed police, and aviators already on duty. The two battalions will remain in Palestine until the arrival of a brigade due from England in the fall.

Eleven squadrons of the British air force were on the alert for quick flights and bombings of any new trouble spots.

The border was reported quiet following a battle yesterday between British troops and 600 Arabs on the frontier between Palestine and Transjordan.

The government broadcast a warning that High Commissioner Sir Harold Alfred Macmichael would delegate his powers to the military commander-in-chief if fresh rioting should break out. The commander would then have a free hand to establish martial law.

RELIEF: A HELP OR A FAILURE? EXPERTS DIFFER

Survey Points Way to Improvement.

BY WILL O'NEIL.

What is wrong with the Chicago Relief administration? What can be done to improve the administration of relief here?

The answers to these questions were obtained during recent weeks from experts on relief administration. Some of these men and women are working in public and private relief agencies. Some are not. Nearly all of them would give their views only when promised that their names would not be used. The reason they fear personal publicity will appear later.

Seven Pertinent Points.

This and subsequent articles will be based on facts and opinions given by these experts. These things stand out in their analysis of the relief picture here:

1. Professional social workers dominate the administration of public relief.

2. The staf of the CRA [Chicago Relief administration] is more interested in finding out what a man needs and in giving it to him than in making sure that he is really entitled to public relief.

3. There is not enough supervision of the staf of the CRA.

4. The records of reliefers are a mess and are too voluminous.

5. The former systems of church and neighborly giving have been submerged under the public relief system.

Politicians Kept Out.

BUT:

6. The power of the social worker has kept the politician out of the relief trough.

7. The professionally trained social workers are the ones for the CRA to hire. They should not, however, be allowed to run the organization. They should be forced to accept more businesslike methods.

These points will be discussed in detail. How corrections can and should be made, in the combined opinions of the experts, can best be told as the relief picture is developed.

The city is divided into nineteen districts. There is a CRA office in each of these districts. If one wants relief he goes to the CRA office nearest his home. A professionally trained social worker is at the head of each office. Most of them are women. In at least two of the district offices there are supervisors who are civil service employés of the county. Trained social workers have been placed in the positions just below them and the county people are virtually devoid of authority.

Four Field Supervisors.

There are four field supervisors, each with general authority over a group of district offices. At the top of the pyramid is Mrs. Clara Paul Paige, head of the family service division of the CRA.

Commissioner Leo M. Lyons is head of the CRA. He is the boss of Mrs. Paige and all of the people under her. But he does not have time to do much active bossing. He holds a second job as executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. Lyons is accounted an excellent administrator by both the IERC and Mayor Kelly. But some, not all, of those interviewed, believe no man could do justice to both of the jobs he holds.

This, the past weeks' survey

TOO BUSY FANNING THE PESTS TO GET ANY WORK DONE

Hitler Decrees Himself Cupid; Love Gets Blow

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 8.—"Marriage is no mere contract between two partners, but a matter concerning the whole nation," Dr. Franz Guertner, minister of justice, said today.

He was discussing Reichsfuehrer Hitler's new Nazi marriage and divorce laws which will become effective Aug. 1.

"The state is entitled to prevent certain marriages," Dr. Guertner continued. "If they are undesirable a public prosecutor must disrupt them. To stress the national importance of marriage, a registrar will, in the future, pronounce marriages 'in the name of the reich'."

Strikes at Church.

The new laws, which will apply to all of Germany, will mean dissolution of the 300 year old partnership between the Roman Catholic church and the state in Austria. They deprive that church of all legal authority in marital affairsand replace the compulsory church wedding with a compulsory civil marriage.

The new laws also abrogate in Austria the legal validity of the principle enforced by the Catholic church on its followers that a Catholic marriage cannot be dissolved by divorce, and establish uniform divorce rules for members of all faiths to be administered by state courts.

The church wedding and the Catholic prohibition of divorce remain unchallenged, but they are deprived of their legal status and reduced to a voluntary church ceremony and discipline that the faithful may or may not accept without prejudicing their rights and obligations under the law of the state.

Legalizes 50,000 Marriages.

One immediate consequence will be the relegalization of some 50,000 marriages contracted by Austrian Catholics who availed themselves of the previous divorce permission introduced by the Austrian Socialists when they were in power and remarried before magistrates without the church's sanction.

Despite their submission to the new Nazi régime, it is expected that Austria's Catholic bishops will protest.

The new measures also incorporate the Nuremberg ghetto regulations, which prohibit marriages between Aryans and Jews, and also the laws forbidding marriage of "hereditarily unhealthy" persons.

Members of the defense and labor corps, the Schutz Staffel [picked Hitler guards] and civil servants will require special marriage permits from their superiors.

Grounds for Divorce.

The new divorce laws provide that a marriage may be dissolved if one of the partners "persistently refuses to produce children without giving any good reason or if contraceptives are used against the law."

Among the causes for divorce is listed "mentally disturbed attitude," which includes "jealousy bordering on hysterics, tendency to gossip, and excessive stinginess."

RETURN TO SOUTHERN STYLE FRIED CHICKEN DEMANDED BY MAYOR

Atlanta, Ga., July 8.—(AP)—A siege of banquets today led Mayor William Hartsfield to demand a return to the old fashioned way of serving fried chicken—cut in little pieces instead of ensemble.

Attacking banquet tradition of placing half chickens on a plate, the mayor pleaded: "Let's get back to the old southern style."

The mayor said that a dinner guest, his elbows restricted by his partners', hasn't a sporting chance against the half fryer with only a knife and fork. He favors the use of fingers.

NO ICE WATER! WPA FOREMAN GETS MUD BATH

Kansas City, Mo., July 8.—(AP)—Ice water demands of WPA workers led to a muddy water bath today for their foreman, Harry Levitt.

Police who restored order said they learned the workmen pushed Levitt down a river bank and into the mud in an effort to advance their demands for ice water and the privilege of buying from ice cream peddlers.

E. S. Grigsby, project superintendent, termed demands unwaranted, saying nearly a ton of ice was used daily to cool drinking water on the project.

Put Money in Safe Place; Locksmith Gets Most of It

Esmond, Ill., July 8.—[Special.]—The Esmond Community club put the proceeds of its annual Camps grove picnic in the vault of the closed Esmond bank for safekeeping. The following day members found they could not open the vault. A locksmith worked two days before he finally opened the door and got the money out. Most of it went to the locksmith for his work.

Find 'Widow of Liege' Guilty of Deaths of 11

LIEGE, Belgium, July 8.—(AP)—Maria Petitjean Beckers—"the widow Beckers of Liege"—was convicted today and sentenced to death for eleven poison murders in the most bizarre criminal case of modern times in Belgium. The death sentence was symbolical, however, since capital punishment no longer is carried out in Belgium.

Maria Beckers.

The penalty for the woman, who is 58 years old, will be commuted to life imprisonment.

Screams of "kill her" went up from a crowd outside the court house when the jury, which heard testimony for a month, filed in to announce its verdict after five hours of deliberation.

The widow lost the reserve she had maintained during the hearing and wept hysterically.

First Murder in 1932.

"Do you feel remorseful?" the president of the court asked. She gave no answer.

The prosecution had charged that Mrs. Beckers made friends with elderly persons in public parks and then poisoned them after stealing or borrowing their money.

The trail of murders laid to the woman started back in 1932 when Charles Beckers, her husband, developed a fatal stomachache. The widow said his death was from "indigestion."

Her husband's tenant, Marie Doupagne, was the next victim, dying mysteriously a year after Beckers. Then came the death of L. Beyer, to whom the widow had become betrothed.

Charged with Forging Will.

A year later a woman acquaintance died under mysterious circumstances. There followed the deaths of seven women—mostly wealthy widows.

Besides the deaths for which she was convicted, police charged her with attempting to kill three other persons. Additional charges against her included one that she forged a will and committed four thefts of securities, jewels, and money.

State Pay Rolls Before Election Bring U.S. Quiz

Several hundred former state pay rollers were ordered yesterday to come into the office of Michael L. Igoe, United States district attorney, for questioning. They will be asked whether they were pushing doorbells in the bitter Democratic primary last April when they were supposed to be building roads for the state highway department.

Igoe started an investigation of the highway pay rolls some time ago after receiving complaints that the department had used federal funds for political purposes. He has power to act under federal laws making such a crime. The public works administration, which has granted millions of dollars for Illinois highways, also is understood to be interested.

Rolls Swell During Campaign.

Investigation already has shown that pay rolls of the highway department were greatly swollen during the primary campaign. The department is headed by F. Lynden Smith, state director of public works and buildings. He was downstate campaign manager for the Horner-Courtney Democratic faction in the campaign.

The ex-employés, most of whose names were on the pay roll only during the primary campaign period, will be asked to prove that they worked for the checks they got. Most of them were carried as laborers at $4 a day.

Will Quiz Twenty a Day.

Warren Canaday, first assistant to Igoe, sent letters to between 450 and 500 of the former employés yesterday. They were asked to come to his office, beginning Monday, in groups of twenty each day. He and Assistant District Attorney Thomas Hart will interview them.

For the time being the investigation is concentrated on employés in District 10 of the highway department, which includes Chicago and its vicinity. Igoe has jurisdiction over only the northern counties of the state.

Records of the highway department show that on March 21, three weeks before the primary, a new pay roll for construction work was set up in District 10 and 453 men put to work. They were dropped on April 20, after the primary. Men on this pay roll received $23,268, of which 45 per cent, Canaday has been informed, was federal money from the PWA.

Another Roll of 434.

A second pay roll in District 10 carried 434 men on state aid road work. They drew $10,518 between April 6 and April 20 and were fired on the latter date. This pay roll also is believed by the investigators to have been made up of 45 per cent federal money and the remainder of state funds.

Both of these pay rolls were certified by Smith, by Ernst Lieberman, state highway engineer, and by Sam J. Nudelman, state director of finance.

In no instance did the employés receive government checks for their work. Under the PWA procedure, the

SEND BARKLEY BACK TO SENATE, KENTUCKY TOLD

Blessing Also Given Bulkley in Ohio.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Aboard the Presidential Special Enroute to West Coast, July 8.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's 4,000 mile cross country tour today lived up to advance billing as a crusade to purge the Democratic party of those who doubt his administration and to extend his political blessing on those he regards true believers in liberalism.

The first act curtain of the tour was lifted at Marietta, O., where, in dedicating the "memorial to the start westward of the nation," Mr. Roosevelt leaped from hardy pioneers to party politics. He interlarded praise for Senator Robert J. Bulkley, administration support, who is being opposed for the Democratic nomination by former Gov. George White.

Stumps for Barkley.

The second act at Covington, Ky., where Mr. Roosevelt made a speech at Latonia race track, injected a note of surprise. In the state where his senate majority leader, Alben W. Barkley, is facing the primary fight of his career with Gov. A. B. [Happy] Chandler, the President was expected to squelch the candidacy of the youthful governor.

Instead he spoke warmly of Chandler, but his glowing words for Barkley carried the unmistakable admonition that the voters of the state would best promote their interests by returning him to the senate.

"I have no doubt that Gov. Chandler would make a good senator from Kentucky," the President said, "but I think he would be the first to acknowledge that as a very junior member of the senate, it would take him many, many years to match the national knowledge, the experience, and the acknowledged leadership in the affairs of your nation of that son of Kentucky, of whom the whole nation is proud, Alben Barkley."

That "Dear Alben" Letter.

Following the death of Senator Joe T. Robinson last year and before the senate had elected his successor as majority leader, President Roosevelt in a communication to the senate addressed Senator Barkley as "My Dear Alben" and recognized him as the acting leader.

Friends of Senator Pat Harrison, who sought the leadership, resented the President's action, charging that he was attempting to dictate whom the senate should name majority leader. Barkley defeated Harrison for the post by only one vote.

Both Chandler and Barkley were on the speakers' platform with the President.

The cleverly worded speech transformed Chandler from the prospective villain of the piece to its juvenile. Gray haired Kentucky politicians hailed the address as a nimble political maneuver but doubted whether it would do much to advance the cause of the sorely pressed leader who twice placed the President's name in nomination before national Democratic convention.

Harpoon for Chandler.

At Bowling Green tonight, where his train halted to permit a rear platform speech, Mr. Roosevelt plunged the harpoon into Chandler's candidacy with the inferential accusation that the governor had attempted to buy his way into the senate by obtaining a federal judgeship for Senator Marvel M. Logan. Bowling Green is the home town of Senator Logan.

"Logan stood square like a rock against dragging the judiciary into the campaign last spring," the President said. "By moral and ethical righteousness he stood an example of probity of which all America should be proud."

The reference was to reports that Chandler had tempted Logan to resign by promise of a federal judgeship, which Logan spurned.

It was reported aboard the train that Senator Logan might release some nationally interesting correspondence between the President and himself at Washington.

The President again praised Senator Barkley, as he earlier had done at Louisville, for "his utmost assistance as majority leader in working out the great problems that confront us." But he did not mention Gov. Chandler in either Louisville or Bowling Green.

Senator Barkley, who had raced to Chillicothe, O., to board the special in advance of Gov. Chandler, rode across the state with the President. The governor got aboard the train at Cincinnati and left the presidential party when it departed from Covington.

Chandler was a poor relation at the Latonia track. The meeting was a rally for Barkley and Chandler only forced his way into the camera lens range by virtue of his rôle as the state's host.

Speaks at Latonia Track.

Approximately 50,000 persons sat or stood in the Latonia grandstand under a blazing sun. Although the stage had been set for Barkley and his banners and buttons were in prominence, the followers of Chandler were as noisy if not as numerous as the Barkley cohorts. The governor's managers stole a march on their opposition by pasting cars in the presidential motorcade with Chandler stickers.

Barkley introduced the President after the senator had been introduced as "the President's strong right arm"—a title once that of Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, whose friendship with the President has jelled.

Mr. Roosevelt began by recalling his visit to the state as a candidate in the fall of 1932 with Barkley, "a man who had fought valiantly as a member of the then Democratic minority, against doing nothing in favor of action to meet growing needs."

"On that day's trip, I know that

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Ed Early shouts "O, Alben" at Senator Barkley so vociferously that President Roosevelt halts Louisville speech to allow acknowledgement of greeting.

Senator Barkley and I were thinking little in terms of partisan politics," he declared. "We were thinking in terms of American needs—not just Kentucky's needs but the deep seated wants that had come into the lives of millions of people scattered throughout every state of the nation.

"Tears were in our eyes. We were affected not alone by the misery but by fortitude—because we realized people still had faith in the institutions of the United States—faith in the government of the United States—faith that their government would, before it was too late, come through."

Calls Governor Friend.

Violets fell on the head of Chandler when he was acclaimed for having put the state on a sound financial basis and when the President said he had considered and still considers the governor a good friend.

Mr. Roosevelt hailed both candidates as men of ability and representative Kentuckians.

"I want to make it definite and clear to you that I am not interfering in any shape, manner, or form in the primary campaign in Kentucky," he continued. "I do not reside in this state—you do. You have the absolute right to vote for any candidate in accordance with the dictates of your conscience. No outside source ought to dragoon you."

Oklahoma City Next.

The next act of the tour will come tomorrow when Mr. Roosevelt pauses in Oklahoma City, Okla., to speak for Senator Elmer Thomas, who is engaged in a three cornered fight for renomination against Gomer Smith and Gov. E. W. Marland.

During an interlude in the night presidential disapproval of Senator George H. Berry of Tennessee was implied when the presidential special raced through the state without a halt. Berry has lost favor with the White House since his attempt to collect five million dollars for alleged marble deposits under Norris dam caused a rift in the TVA's directorate which has become a matter of congressional investigation.

Covington Welcome Warmer.

The president received a far warmer welcome at Covington than he was accorded at Marietta in the morning. There the citizens lining the sidewalks and those massed in the park stared at the President with cool curiosity and listened to his words in detachment.

At the unveiling of the Gutzon Borglum pioneer monument Mr. Roosevelt extolled his Ohio senate supporter, saying "the cavalry captain who protected the log cabins of the northwest is now surplanted by legislators, like Senator Bulkley, toiling over the drafting of such statutes and over the efficiency of government machinery to administer them so that protection and help of the government can be extended in full."

White, a native of Marietta sat on the platform with a wry face. He was there as chairman of the anniversary commission, commemorating the 150th year of the first permanent northwest settlement.

Cool Shoulder for Davey.

Another downcast face on the platform was that of Gov. Martin Davey, a candidate for renomination against Charles Sawyer, Democratic national committeeman from Ohio. Davey was given rather chill treatment by the President.

The Marietta address closed with a reiteration of the political philosophy Mr. Roosevelt expounded in his recent fireside chat. He said:

"I believe the American people, not afraid of their own capacity to choose forward looking representatives to run their government, want the same coöperative security and have the same courage to achieve it in 1938 as in 1788.

"I am sure they know that we will always have a frontier—of social problems—and that we must always move in to bring law and order to it. In that confidence I am pushing on. I am sure you will push on with me."

RELIEF DIVORCED FROM CAMPAIGN, SAYS VAN NUYS

Promises No Political Scandal in Indiana.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Indianapolis, Ind., July 8.—[Special.]—Politics is to play no part in WPA and other relief in the Indiana campaign, Senator Frederick Van Nuys declared today, as the stage was set for his renomination by the Democratic state convention Tuesday.

Weeks ago the senator, who at the time was slated for banishment to the salt mines because of his opposition to the Roosevelt court packer and reorganization measures, consulted WPA officials with a view to keeping politics and relief divorced. At the time he was prepared to run as an independent. Today Van Nuys reiterated his views.

Promises No Scandals.

"Indiana," he said, "is not going to have any political stench in connection with the manipulation of WPA for political purposes. The campaign will be free of any such scandal.

"Weeks ago before John J. Jennings, state director of WPA and a high grade business man, went to California, I had a conference with him. It lasted until midnight. He will go down the line 100 per cent in keeping politics out of relief and relief out of politics.

"He said he will look personally into any complaints. I have a few to submit to him on his return and he will coöperate to the full. Indiana is going to come mighty clean on this."

Contrasts Kentucky Charges.

Observers were somewhat inclined to contrast this with the situation across the Ohio river in Kentucky, where Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler' camp is saying that pump priming is operating as vote priming for Senator Alben W. Barkley, in whose behalf President Roosevelt was doing battle today in Kentucky.

Senator Van Nuys, on invitation, went before the platform committee today. He emphasized that if he is to be the nominee for senator the platform is not to contain any plank inconsistent with the stand he took against court packing and reorganization.

Van Nuys said he has been assured by the chiefs of all the Democratic groups, that the platform will steer clear of this. His position is that he is not giving one inch on his beliefs in fundamental measures of this sort.

Says He Won't Compromise.

If there should be any hitch in the present program to renominate Van Nuys by acclamation, it probably would come over any declarations on this subject which might possibly come in platform or keynote speeches. Van Nuys said he is adamant on court packing and reorganization, that he will not compromise and has not been asked to.

Men who know him well say if the platform finally adopted should run counter to his stand Van Nuys would reject any nomination.

The platform, of course, will contain a general plank praising the Roosevelt administration.

Warning Given Committee.

"I told the committee," said the senator, "that I was against any declaration in the platform of any character seeking to bind me to support such bills or similar legislation looking to the future."

Van Nuys suggested a plank calling for a nomination of candidates for senator and governor by direct vote at the primaries. He does not expect to get far on that, but he has been an advocate of direct nominations since he first went to the state senate in 1913.

Long distance calls and telegrams were pouring into Van Nuys' headquarters from many states hailing the Indiana situation today as a triumph for old time Jeffersonian Democracy. Leaders of all groups in the state party yesterday proclaimed Van Nuys as candidate of the Townsend-McNutt-McHale-Elder organization, rated as one of the most dominant state machines in the country.

Old timers held that, unless there is a slip, Indiana's Democracy has reverted to the conservative tradition handed down by the late Senator Tom Taggart Sr., the late Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, and the late Senator Samuel M. Ralston. Van Nuys is an old Taggart follower.

Banished from State Five Years in Lieu of Prison

Minneapolis, Minn., July 8.—(AP)—Joseph Bellini, former Indiana contractor who came to Minneapolis from Chicago two years ago as a labor organizer, today was banished from the state for five years as an alternative to serving up to five years in prison for assault. Bellini was convicted Feb. 22 of beating Earl Johnstad, truck driver, last November. His commitment to the penitentiary had been stayed pending a hearing on a motion for a new trial.

STATE PAY ROLLS DURING CAMPAIGN BRING U. S. QUIZ

state does the work, turns in a report at Washington, and is then repaid by PWA for the share of the work on which it got a federal grant. In February the highway department got a payment of $83,707 from the federal government under this system.

Limited to Federal Misuse.

Igoe can take action only in cases involving the use of federal funds. Maintenance of roads by the highway department is paid for in state funds. Investigators found that maintenance pay rolls also were boosted during the primary campaign.

In another highway investigation being conducted by the district attorney's office, Maj. George A. Quinlan, superintendent of the Cook county highway department, conferred for an hour yesterday with Canaday.

He gave the prosecutor complete tabulations on two sets of bids received by the county on twenty-eight highway projects. Sixteen of these roads are to be built with the aid of PWA grants, which accounts for the federal government's interest, and the county's share of state gas tax collections.

WOMAN BRANDS FRAUD CHARGE AS PERSECUTION

Scranton, Pa., July 8.—(AP)—Miss Catherine McNelis, president of Tower Magazine, Inc., today asserted that her indictment by a federal jury in New York on charges of using the mails in a $1,000,000 scheme to defraud national advertisers was the end of a long period of persecution.

She declared that the indictment was part of the defense in a suit brought by trustees of her firm, now bankrupt, against the Fremkin corporation and pending before the Delaware state Supreme court.

Indicted with Miss McNelis were her brother, John P. McNelis, circulation manager of the firm; Joseph B. Flynn, business manager, and E. Frederick Low, controler.

Assistant United States Attorney Jesse Moss charged the group with defrauding advertisers by false circulation reports.

MOTHER WON'T PROSECUTE SON FOR $3,000 THEFT

Stanley Pruski was arrested yesterday when he drove up to his home at 1403 Bosworth avenue in a newly purchased second hand automobile. He admitted that the money for the car had been stolen from his mother, Mrs. Katherine Koczorowska, who earlier in the day complained to police that $6,700 had been taken. Pruski, who still had $2,830, said the car cost $125 and that he had stolen only about $3,000. Mrs. Koczorowska declined to sign a complaint against her son, but police decided to hold him, nevertheless.

Because the bride's brother has to milk the cows the wedding will be held at 9 p. m.

PAPER BAGS USE DEVELOPS INTO KENTUCKY ISSUE

Containers Take Spotlight in Blue Grass State.

London, Ky., July 8.—[Special.]—The use of large paper bags bearing a political advertisment for United States Senator Alben W. Barkley in distributing food to relief clients in Kentucky today had become a major issue in the Democratic senator's campaign for renomination.

John M. Robsion.

Representative John M. Robsion [R., Ky.] recently charged in a speech before the house that the bags, which admittedly were distributed in this area of the state, made many persons believe they were receiving relief from Senator Barkley.

"The desire for power and political preferment must be very strong, indeed," Mr. Robsion declared, "when any man, or group of men, would so prostitute the funds for the needy to promote their own political fortunes.

Backs Relief for Needy.

"I am strong for relief for the needy; so is the Republican party; but we denounce the use of the taxpayers' money to pay the expenses of primary campaigns or general elections. Such conduct as this is sowing dragon's teeth in this country. We are sowing the wind and we shall reap the whirlwind."

Representative Robsion said he was informed it has been openly stated in some cases that persons receiving relief were given to understand the aid came from Senator Barkley. The bags contained the small lettered words "donated by a friend of" and then in large letters "Senator Alben W. Barkley."

Mr. Robsion quoted from a letter written to President Roosevelt by Judge Brady M. Stewart, state campaign manager for Gov. A. B. Chandler, in which an appeal was made for presidential aid "to stop the scandalous action of those in charge of the WPA in Kentucky."

"The Works Progress administration in Kentucky," Mr. Robsion quoted Judge Stewart as writing, "has been converted into an out and out political machine, dedicated over and above all other considerations to reëlecting Senator Barkley.

"Those with starving mouths to feed are forced to surrender their one remaining privilege of choosing for whom they shall vote, otherwise they and their dependents must go hungry and naked."

Assumes Responsibility.

Dan B. House, an ardent Barkley supporter, has taken full responsibility for distribution of the "Barkley" bags in Laurel county, of which London is the seat. He admitted he ordered 150 bags but said he did so after he and other Barkley supporters had been appealed to by many needy persons who were not being cared for in the regular manner.

House said he personally bought food and presented it in the "Barkley" bags to needy persons. He asserted that so far as he knew, the bags were used only during the time that a certifying agent was not in office because of a technicality. When an agent was provided, he said, the bags were left at Barkley headquarters.

Although House insisted he ordered only 150 bags and had no knowledge of how they could have got into possession of any one else, Mrs. Annie W. Herzig, operator of a small grocery across the street from WPA offices, said she received "fewer than one hundred" of the lettered sacks.

Mrs. Herzig said the bags were left with her by a man she did not know and that she passed them out to reliefers who frequently came to her store.

GRAND JURY QUIZ ORDERED IN PENN GRAFT CHARGES

Gov. Earle and 12 Party Aids Accused.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 8.—(AP)—Charges of political graft, made during the Pennsylvania primary campaign, today brought on a grand jury investigation of Gov. George H. Earle's Democratic state administration.

Gov. Earle and twelve of his associates were named in the charges, which have been in and out of the Pennsylvania Supreme court for three months.

Judge Paul N. Schaeffer, assigned by the state Supreme court to conduct the proceedings, said the order for the Dauphin county [Harrisburg] grand jury to proceed would be signed Monday.

Margiotti Asks Quiz.

The investigation was asked first by Charles J. Margiotti when he was attorney general and also a Democratic candidate for governor opposing Earle's choice, Charles Alvin Jones of Pittsburgh, who won. The governor ousted Margiotti, who then took his charges to District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, a Republican.

The Supreme court termed Shelley's first petition too vague and indefinite, and he submitted a revised petition. The high court found there were questions of fact to be settled, sent Schaeffer here, and the judge, after numerous conferences, today announced there would be a grand jury investigation.

Earle's Aids Accused.

Shelley aimed his charges at Earle, first Democratic governor in forty years; David L. Lawrence, Democratic state chairman; Ralph M. Bashore, secretary of labor and industry; Harry E. Kalodner, former secretary to Earle and now federal judge in the eastern district; Matthew H. McCloskey, Philadelphia contractor and political leader; Edward W. Prendergast, secretary to the governor; Arthur E. Colegrove, former secretary of property and supplies; Roy Brownmiller, secretary of highways, and five other officials and party leaders.

The accusations included charges that legislation favorable to brewers was sold for a $50,000 contribution to the Democratic campaign fund; the Sunday movie bill was passed for $100,000; liquor and wine salesmen were forced to kick back $40,000 for sales to the state monopoly; state employés were forced to contribute $2,000,000, and architects on state buildings had to return a percentage of their fees.

ASK COURT CITE 10 C. I. O. PICKETS FOR DEFYING LAW

Foundry Strikers Scoff at Grand Jury Inquiry.

Contempt citations against ten leaders of the C. I. O. pickets at the Chicago Hardware Foundry company in North Chicago will be sought this morning before Judge Ralph J. Dady in the Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan. This action runs hand in hand with a grand jury investigation called for Monday morning to determine whether the law or the C. I. O. shall hold sway in Lake county.

Officials of the company yesterday designated the ten men as those who have inspired more than two hundred other pickets to violate the injunction issued by Judge Dady last Saturday. The court order was issued to restrain interference with employés wishing to go back to work at the foundry. It has been flouted derisively by the C. I. O.

Calls Fifteen Witnesses.

State's Attorney Charles E. Mason served subpenas yesterday on fifteen witnesses to appear before the grand jury. The witnesses include company officials, representatives of the loyal employés, and policemen and deputy sheriffs assigned to maintain order at the foundry. Mason is seeking indictments charging the pickets with conspiracy, intimidation, inciting or attempting to incite riots, and resisting law enforcement officers.

The pickets sneered yesterday at the coming grand jury inquiry. Their spokesmen said that body could do nothing.

Seventy employés tried to enter the plant Thursday. They were repelled by the shouting C. I. O. ranks. The employés made no further attempt yesterday. They are awaiting results of the grand jury investigation and the contempt hearings.

Strike Ends Fifth Week.

Today marks the end of the fifth week of the plant's enforced idleness. The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers, a C. I. O. affiliate, called a strike June 6 in protest against a 10 per cent wage cut. Many of the 450 foundry employés, however, belong to an independent union, the Ironworkers' Protective association. They want work. They don't want to go on the relief rolls. Many of the C. I. O. pickets are on relief, although those from out of town were refused aid.

Edward B. Sherwin, president of the foundry, said yesterday that all the workers have lost more than $60,000 in wages since the strike began. The company has lost 1,100 orders. The 10 per cent wage cut is more imperative now than before, Sherwin added.

Draw Contempt Petitions.

The Waukegan law firm of Edwards & Block, counsel for the company, prepared the petitions yesterday against the C. I. O. leaders. The petitions ask that the pickets be required to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court for violating the injunction. Notice was served on Attorney Lester F. Collins, representing the C. I. O. union, that the petitions will be presented to Judge Dady this morning. The pickets will be asked to make answer for an early hearing.

Those named in the petitions are Robert Woertz, Frank Kozak, Sam Runyan, Nick Vihos, Joseph Pankiewicz, Nick Marcinkus, Paul Lorek, August Pycke, Laverne Adams, and John Machnick. Woretz is a C. I. O. organiber from out of town who never worked at the foundry. He has been in command of the pickets since his superior, Oakley Mills, left Tuesday morning.

Lorek is a former employé of the foundry who was laid off several months ago. The other eight were employed in the plant when the strike was called.

Accused of Ridiculing Order.

The contempt petitions are based on affidavits by Sherwin and Jonas Frederickson, personnel officer at the plant. The defendants are accused of holding the injunction up to ridicule and contempt, of urging the other pickets to disobey the order, and of threatening the loyal employés.

Several overt acts are alleged against the ten leaders. One is their disrespect of the court on Tuesday when they prompted the other pickets to jeer a deputy sherif who read the restraining order. They followed this, it is charged, by tearing up their individual copies of the writ and trampling them underfoot.

Lock Arms, Bar Entry.

On Thursday the pickets locked arms and formed an impenetrable force about the foundry. They advanced on seventy employés who were approaching the gates in an effort to go to wor kand forced them to retreat.

Shortly afterward thirty-five of the pickets, including women and children, prevented the North Western railroad from switching an empty box car to the foundry gate. Woertz said his pickets would fling themselves beneath the car and be killed rather than let the train proceed. The pickets were warned at the time that this action constituted interference with interstate commerce. They replied with boos.

A conference among company officials and representatives of the strikers failed to break the deadlock yesterday morning. The conference was the result of pleas by wives of forty of the strikers.

SUES TO DIVORCE COLIN CAMPBELL, LEITER GRANDSON

Colin Leiter Campbell, grandson of the late Levi Z. Leiter, was sued for divorce in Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Elisabeth Campbell, on a charge of desertion. The couple were married Dec. 5, 1932, at Tulsa, Okla., and separated Jan. 10, 1937. Mrs. Campbell, the former Elisabeth Cook Lynch of Tulsa, asks for custody of their two children, Alison, 4 years old, and Juliet, 3. Campbell is the son of the late Col. Colin Campbell of the British army and the late Nancy Leiter, daughter of the Chicago merchant.

URGES OFFICIALS BE REQUIRED TO REVEAL INCOME

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 8.—(AP)—United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] proposed today that government officials be required to make public the amount of income they derive from market transactions, personal holdings, or private services.

The senator, in a statement from his home here, said need exists for regulation to protect the public from "outright exploitation."

"We constantly hear ugly rumors about 'leaks' that have been capitalized for public profit," Vandenberg said.

"None of them ever comes to proof. Most of them probably are untrue. The best protection which honest officials can have, in such circumstances, is a publicity requirement, with a criminal penalty attached, which makes the whole record public."

He said that if incomes of public officials are enhanced by private personal services or by sources that might be affected by governmental action "it is the public's business and it is the public's right to have indisputable facts."

EMPLOYES AGREE TO ELEVATED LINE WAGE AGREEMENT

Employés of the Chicago Rapid Transit company [elevated lines] voted yesterday by a 4 to 1 majority to extend until Dec. 1 the wage agreement which expired May 31. This retains the present wage scale and the week's vacation with pay.

In the event the company is unable to meet the full pay roll, the men also voted to accept prior lien certificates up to 12½ per cent of their wages for a total of three months.

Col. A. A. Sprague, trustee of the company, had asked approval of this plan. Yesterday he was also given permission by Federal Judge James H Wilkerson to issue $300,000 in trustee's certificates to assist the company in financing pay rolls for the next three months.

FIND RIVER VICTIM'S BODY.

The body of George W. Bombard, 20 years old, 516 Sims street, Aurora, who drowned Tuesday when he was swept over the West Main street dam of the Fox river in Aurora, was recovered yesterday a mile and a half below the dam.

120 MORE JAILED IN NEW ORLEANS TAXICAB STRIKE

Raid CIO Offices; Charge Advocacy of Violence.

New Orleans, La., July 8.—[Special.]—New Orleans police battered down the doors of a C. I. O. union headquarters here late today and arrested 120 men. It was the fourth raid in two weeks.

Chief of Police George Ryer, who led the raid, said he had evidence that speakers at the meeting had urged members of the National Maritime union, a C. I. O. affiliate, to use violence in the truck and taxicab strike here.

Many in the meeting escaped over roofs to adjoining buildings, but 120 were seized by policemen and carted to jail. They will be arraigned in Recorder's court, where more than 100 C. I. O. men, arrested in previous raids, were released today.

Raid Answers Challenge.

The police action today was a forceful reply to the instruction given C. I. O. members by their attorney, Matthew S. Braniff, after yesterday's raid, to resist with force and arms any further attempt by police to enter their premises without warants.

"I do not intend to let the communist industrial organization cause riots and disorder in this city," said Police Chief Ryer, "and I will continue to make raids whenever I see they are necessary to prevent disorder.

"We'll keep arresting them and keep them in jail as long as they attempt to preach violence and start disturbances. I'm willing to listen to our own laboring people, but I do not intend to let imported Reds come in here and run this city."

Kraschel Would Arbitrate.

Des Moines, Ia., July 8.—(AP)—Gov. Nels G. Kraschel, making what he termed a final attempt to arbitrate the Maytag Washing Machine company controversy, tonight announced he had asked the company and representatives of C. I. O. strikers each to select five persons for possible membership on a board of arbitration.

At the same time, he said he had instructed state agents at Newton to assist the sherif in maintaining order and to prevent unlawful assembly.

The governor said he would give each party—the Maytag company and the C. I. O. union — three days in which to name five persons for the board.

From each group the governor will choose one. The two then would choose a third to sit with them in an attempt to iron out difficulties arising from the two month strike which began when the company posted a 10 per cent wage cut.

At Newton, Sherif Earl Shields and Mayor George Campbell issued a proclamation calling for 1,000 volunteers to aid their officers in handling any emergency which might arise in the strike.

About 1,400 workers have been out of work since May 9.

TRUCK DRIVERS THREATEN VOTE TO GO ON STRIKE

Unless officials of large trucking companies in Chicago agree to open negotiations with the Truck Drivers' union by next Wednesday, a strike vote wil be taken, a union official said yesterday.

John O'Brien, secretary of the Highway Drivers, Helpers, and Platform Workers' union, an A. F. of L. unit, said most of the operators refuse to negotiate. He claimed that more than half of the 5,000 truck workers in the city are union members.

The union, he said, is asking a wage scale ranging from 60 to 70 cents an hour with a 48 hour week.

Train Strikes Automobile Driver Seriously Hurt

Leonard James, 21 years old, 6947 South Ada street, was seriously injured early today when his automobile was struck by a fast Baltimore and Ohio railway passenger train at the crossing at 89th street and Vincennes avenue. He suffered a possible skull fracture and is in the Little Company of Mary hospital. Michael Astasea, 1035 West 92d place, the gateman, said he tried to flag James down with a lantern.

Trafic Charges Against 1st Mayor of Berwyn Dropped

Charges against George Murphy, first mayor of Berwyn, accused of reckless driving, disorderly conduct, and running through a stop light, were dismissed yesterday for want of prosecution. Murphy, who lives at 624 South Elmwood avenue, Oak Park, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Martin H. McGrath in Oak Park.

CHOIRS WILL SING AGAIN TOMORROW IN FIVE FORESTS

Tribune Concerts Offer Variety of Talent.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Five of the forest preserves that lie around Chicago will resound tomorrow afternoon to choral music as the second group of a series of Sunday concerts are given under the auspices of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the Cook county commissioners.

At four o'clock baseball bats will be dropped, late lunches brought to a hurried conclusion, and tree shaded card games adjourned. Picnickers will crowd as they did last Sunday around selected spots in the preserves [perhaps a bright glade with a glimpse of water through the wall of trees] where the choirs will establish headquarters for the one hour concert.

Encourage All to Sing.

These picnickers not only will have an opportunity to hear light and melodious music under ideal summer surroundings but they also will have a chance to take part in the proceedings. In each of the preserves there will come a point in the concert where the announcer will ask the audience to join in the singing, and the music of such widely admired songs as "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" will rise skyward from as many throats as can be mustered. Each program will conclude with a mass performance of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Should inclement weather necessitate the cancellation of the concerts, announcements will be made over W-G-N starting at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

DRIVERS' LICENSE TO BECOME LAW WITHOUT TEETH

Gov. Horner Expected to Withhold Funds.

BY HAL FOUST.

Gov. Horner is expected to sign the drivers' license bill minus its appropriation clause. With this signature the safety measure will become a law, but it will be a statute without any funds for its administration.

Otto Kerner. [Fred G. Wright Photo.]

The regular session of the general assembly, convening in January, will be asked to appropriate for the administration of the act. This may revive the squabble between the Horner-Courtney and Nash-Kelly factions of the Democrats over the division of the new pay rolls.

Opinion of Attorney General.

This outlook for the future of the drivers' license appeared yesterday with reliable reports from Springfield that Attorney General Otto Kerner on Monday will give the governor an opinion on the constitutionality of the bill. It was reported that the attorney general will hold that the bill is constitutional, but that the appropriation section is unconstitutional. The governor usually follows the recommendations of his legal adviser.

The drivers' license bill was passed in the senate with an appropriation of $300,000, all going to Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes, who is a Nash-Kelly follower. In the house, the governor had a bill giving all of a $300,000 appropriation to the department of public works headed by his downstate campaign director, F. Lynden Smith.

Error in Procedure Found.

In a truce between the rival factions, it was agreed to give Hughes $300,000 and Smith $100,000 to cover administration costs up to July 1, 1939. The house passed the senate bill, as so amended, by the two-thirds majority required of an appropriation measure. The senate concurred in the amendment by a two-thirds majority.

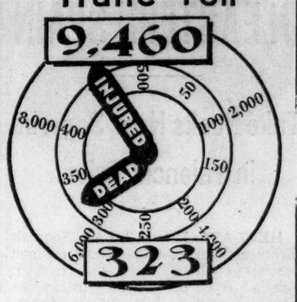
The shadow on the appropriation bill found by the attorney general was the senate's roll call on its original approval of the measure. The vote was 27 to 0. This was not a two-thirds majority.

Horner never liked the $300,000-$100,000 split. He agreed to it only after it was explained to him that the deadline for obtaining licenses under the bill was May 1, 1939, and his department of public works would have little expense before July 1, 1939. The function of this department is for the state police to examine drivers whose qualifications are suspected.

Hughes has the expense of printing application blanks and license cards and mailing them separately to 2,700,000 drivers as well as the cost of setting up a recording system and files for each of these drivers. None of this preliminary work can proceed until an appropriation is available.

If the embittered Democrats can get together, it was pointed out the regular session of the legislature might enact an appropriation with an emergency clause for it to become effective with passage and the governor's signature. This would cause some delay, although not a great deal, in the safety regulation becoming operative.

THE MASSACRE Chicago's 1938 Trafic Toll



More than 98% of the city's automobile fatalities are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

AGED WHEATON WOMAN KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Driver of Other Car Hangs Self in Cell.

Mrs. Clara Page Fay, 76 years old, 519 North Scott street, Wheaton, was killed last night in an automobile accident near Lincoln, Mass., in which her daughter, her grandson, and two friends were hurt. Further tragedy was added when the driver responsible for the crash ended his life.

The accident occurred in Concord pike. Mrs. Fay was on a sightseeing trip at the time. With her were her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth F. Taylor, and Joshua B. Taylor, 25, both of the Wheaton address, and two unidentified friends. Taylor, the grandson, was driving. Mrs. Taylor suffered a possible skull fracture.

CHINESE FLYERS SINK JAP WARSHIP IN YANGTZE RIVER

Destroy 17 Planes in Raid on Air Base.

HANKOW, China, July 8.—(AP)—Chinese air force headquarters today reported that a Japanese warship turned over on its side and apparently went down when Chinese bombers scored direct hits in a raid on enemy naval concentrations in the Yangtze river.

Chinese airmen were busy from daybreak to sunset as successive squadrons of heavy bombers and lighter planes attacked Japanese airfields at Anking and Wuhu and the warships.

They reported seventeen enemy planes destroyed on the ground at Anking and considerable damage to the Wuhu air base as results of the day's work. All Chinese raiders returned safely to their bases, headquarters said.

[Japanese naval officers at Shanghai said one Chinese bomber was shot down in the attack on the warships at Anking.]

Japan Warns Powers.

SHANGHAI, July 9 [Saturday].—(AP)—Japanese authorities warned the United States and other neutral powers today that neutral vessels and citizens along an eighty mile stretch of the Yangtze river were endangered by spreading warfare.

The warning, contained in memoranda sent to diplomatic representatives of the neutral powers, stressed the "desirability of voluntary evacuation" along the Yangtze between Nanking and Wanghsikong, halfway to Hankow, China's provisional capital. In particular it cautioned against remaining in the eighty mile stretch above Kiukiang, 135 miles downstream from Hankow.

The announcement referred to previous communications asking evacuation of river stretches, which American and British authorities had rejected, and said Japan "regretted" the replies, which pointed out that neutral naval vessels had their flags painted on awnings. The statement said such identification was insufficient and contained an element of danger.

SIGN AGREEMENT TO END 100 YEAR CHACO DISPUTE

BUENOS AIRES, July 9 [Saturday].—(AP)—Bolivia and Paraguay early today initialed an agreement to submit their 100 year old quarrel over the Gran Chaco to arbitration.

The accord was accepted at 2:50 a. m. after a three and a half hour session of the Chaco peace conference at the palace of the foreign office.

It was initialed by Bolivian Foreign Minister Eduardo Diez Demedina, Paraguayan Foreign Minister Cecilio Baez, and delegates representing Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, Uruguay, and the United States.

The two countries fought a three year war over Gran Chaco and had been unable to agree on peace terms since the 1935 armistice.

The tentative agreement was said to be a compromise between the boundary proposed in May by the peace conference and a counter proposal by Paraguay. The strip of territory between the two proposed boundaries averages about 20 miles in width, and is slaty and barren ground in the west and north and swampy as it approaches the Paraguay river on the east. Either proposed line would leave Bolivia its oil fields.

Captain of Gunboat Panay, Sunk by Japs, Is in Hospital

San Francisco, Cal., July 8.—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander J. J. Hughes, who was captain of the United States gunboat Panay when it was bombed and sunk in the Yangtze river, China, by Japanese planes last Dec. 12, was stricken today with acute appendicitis. He was taken to the hospital at Mare Island navy yard. Commander Hughes had planned to enter a San Diego hospital for further treatment of wounds suffered in the Panay incident.

Abdul Moneim, at present motoring in Europe, sent the request by letter. King Farouk has not yet replied. The prince is the only son of the former Khedive Abbas Helmi Pasha II., whom the British deposed as ruler Dec. 19, 1914, on the nomination of his uncle, Sultan Hussein Kamel. The would be bridegroom is the most eligible of Egypt's princes. He is his father's sole heir, and heir also to the possessions of his equally wealthy uncle, Prince Mohamed Aly.

ACT TO CLEAN UP EVASIONS OF TAX ALL OVER STATE

Plans for a downstate drive against sales tax evaders similar to the current Cook county campaign were announced yesterday in Springfield by S. L. Nudelman, director of the state finance department. Nudelman said he would employ flying squads of investigators such as took part in the sales tax investigation about a year ago. Evidence of criminal evasion will be turned over to local state's attorneys for action. Homer M. Adams, assistant finance director, probably will head the downstate drive, Nudelman said.

EX-GOV MURRAY HIT BY STRANGER AT HUGO, OKLA.

Hugo, Okla., July 8.—(AP)—Ex-Gov. William H. [Alfalfa Bill] Murray was struck in the face and knocked against a wall in a hotel here tonight. His assailant was overpowered by a group of bystanders after Murray had swung back at him.

Murray said he had gone to an upstairs room with friends to "talk about the campaign." As they emerged from the room, he said, the man, who was attired in pajamas, stepped up and said, "What's your name?"

"You tell me yours," Murray said. "My name's Smith," Murray said the other replied.

The former governor said he stuck out his hand and the man struck him.

4 BRITISH PLANES HOP 4,300 MILES TO EGYPT—A RECORD

LONDON, July 8.—(AP)—Four British bomber type planes today established a record for the longest nonstop flight by an organized unit when they landed at Ismailia, Egypt, from Cranwell, Lincolnshire.

An air ministry announcement said the planes, single motored craft carrying no bombs or equipment, made the 4,300 mile flight in about 32 hours.

The previous record was held by the Italian air force, two of whose planes flew 3,320 miles from Dakar, French West Africa, to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, last Jan. 25.

REBELS CAPTURE TOWN OF NULES IN EASTERN SPAIN

Take Peaks Near Segorbe in Valencia Drive.

HENDAYE, France [at the Spanish Frontier], July 8.—(AP)—A two pronged insurgent drive near the eastern Spanish coast pressed tonight against government defenders of Valencia deployed among the jagged rocks of coastal mountain ranges.

Insurgent dispatches from Saragossa said Galician troops under Gen. Miguel Aranda had captured Nules, a town on the seaboard highway which leads through Sagunto to Valencia. Nules is twenty-eight miles north of Valencia.

The government's national defense ministry issued a communique in Barcelona that government forces had abandoned the walled town and taken up new positions to the south on the road to Sagunto.

Objective Is Almenara.

Nules and the sector around it virtually became a no man's land after the insurgents wiped out the loyalist positions in Mascarell, less than two miles to the north. Aranda had sent columns southward on either side of the town and the left flank column was said to have reached the outskirts of Moncofar, five miles southeast, near the coast.

The main objective of the Galicians was Almenara, less than eight miles north of Sagunto.

The second phase of the insurgent offensive took place simultaneously a few miles west of Nules. Troops under the command of Gen. Garcia Valino there were reported to have reached heights in the Sierra de Espadan from where they could see the towers of Segorbe, eight miles away.

Segorbe is on the Teruel-Mediterranean highway, which joins at Sagunto the seaboard road down which Gen. Aranda's main force has moved.

[Loyalist reports from Madrid said nineteen persons were killed and seven injured when nine insurgent planes raided Segorbe, Soneja, and Sot de Ferret.]

Barcelona Again Bombed.

BARCELONA, July 9 [Saturday].—(AP)—Insurgent warplanes conducted a moonlight raid on the northern outskirts of Barcelona early today, inflicting an undetermined number of casualties. Numerous bombs crashed into a workers' district where the greatest damage was done. Anti-aircraft batteries and searchlights kept the raiders from the center of the city.

ROBBER-SLAYER GETS LIFE TERM; HIS PAL 30 YEARS

James Torello, 28 years old, who admitted that he fired the shot that killed Abraham Siplester, 65 years old, 3318 Monroe street, during a robbery on May 11, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Rudolph Desort in the Criminal court.

Bertram De Lisle, his accomplice in the robbery, was sentenced to 30 years in prison, and Anthony Tondola, in whose home Torello's gun and a watch belonging to Siplester was found, was sentenced to 1 to 2 years in prison on a charge of being an accessory.

Torello and De Lisle pleaded guilty and Tondola was found guilty in a bench trial. Torello said his gun went off accidentally when Siplester pushed a lighted cigar into his face.

GPU PURGE STIRS UNREST IN REDS' FAR EAST ARMY

Bluecher Defies Order to Report in Moscow.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, July 8.—Serious disorders were reported in many soviet Russian garrisons in eastern Siberia following the arrival of special GPU [secret police] detachments from Moscow which made arrests among the commanding personnel.

[Acme photos].
Marshal V. C. Bluecher [above].
Klementi E. Voroshilov

Marshal Vassily C. Bluecher, Russia's commander-in-chief in the far east, was ordered to Moscow by Klementi E. Voroshilov, soviet commissar of war, to explain the conflict between the GPU and Gen. Lucikov Samoirovich who fled into Manchukuo recently and is now in Tokio.

Marshal Bluecher's reply that the trip to Moscow would be impossible at the present time because of the GPU purge of his staf, caused much excitement in the soviet capital. The possibility of Bluecher seizing power in Siberia and declaring himself independent of Moscow long has been discussed in that city.

Reports Jap Offer.

Latest reports said Bluecher has justified his breach of discipline through furnishing Voroshilov with documents to prove he was approached recently by a Japanese government agent who tried to bribe him to set up an independent Siberia.

Bluecher said, the reports indicated, that a Russian named Tchernich, living in Manchukuo, approached him, offering a large sum in American dollars if he would accept certain offers from the Japanese government. These were said to encompass the immediate separation from Russia of all Siberian territory east of Lake Baikal and the establishment of this area as a new independent state.

Litvinov Calls On Jap Envoy.

The Japanese, Bluecher continued, suggested that he break off relations with Moscow. They offered to assist him, he said, should war result. The Japanese, it was said, offered to sign a pact of nonaggression and friendship with the suggested new state and provide financial assistance and credits for developing agriculture and communications.

Tchernich stated, Bluecher said, that the offer came from Zuru Kuvabara, former Japanese minister to Afghanistan, who recently arrived in Manchukuo.

Maxim Litvinov, foreign commissar, called on the Japanese ambassador, who was reported to have replied that he knew nothing of the affair and hinted it was a frameup.

ENVOY BULLITT FLAYS 'CERTAIN NATIONS' WHO 'MURDER' CIVILIANS

REIMS, France, July 8.—(AP)—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt delivered a scathing attack today on "certain nations" who resort to "murder of defenseless men, women, and children."

The ambassador named no countries. He spoke at Reims city hall, where he was made an honorary citizen. After praising "France, England, all the countries of America, and a host of other nations," who, he said, are eager to live as good neighbors, Bullitt turned to bombings of civilians.

"Only twenty years ago the murder of defenseless men, women, and children by armed men sent a shudder of horror throughout the world," he said. "Since 1918 the decay of international morality has been so rapid that today certain nations are not ashamed to employ such crimes as instruments of national policy. Without international morality, as without national morality, there can be no human life worth living."

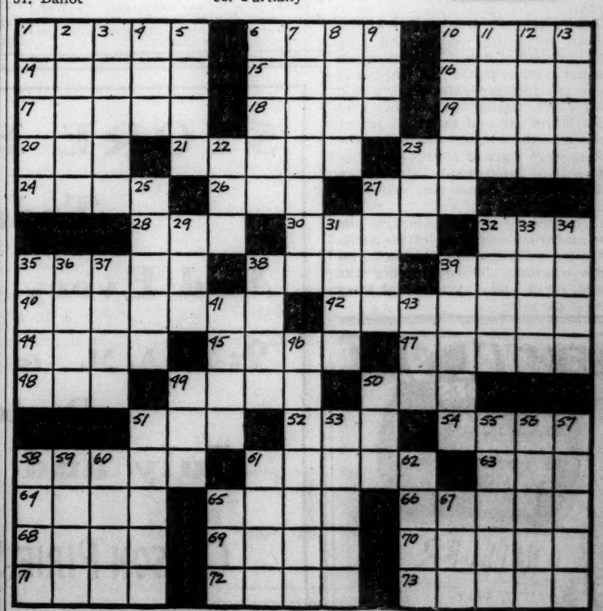
YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED



118 IN PRISONS GIVEN FREEDOM BY PAROLE BOARD

4 from Cook County Are Released 2d Time.

One hundred eighteen convicts yesterday were ordered released from state prisons by the board of pardons and paroles in Springfield. This number is the highest for any single month since December, 1936, when 175 prisoners were sent back on parole to Cook county alone.

Of those freed yesterday, 57 were convicted in the Criminal court in Chicago. This brings the number of prisoners returned thus far to Cook county in 1938 to 121, but the total is 63 less than were released in a similar period last year. Throughout the state 53 were paroled from Pontiac reformatory, 2 from the women's reformatory at Dwight, 23 from the prison for the criminal insane at Menard, 32 from Stateville, and 8 from Joliet penitentiary.

Four Get Second Parole.

The parolees ranged from Oswald Obeldobel, 63 years old, former village clerk and collector of Riverdale, to petty robbers and burglars. Four of the Cook county prisoners were paroled for a second time, according to Chicago crime commission records.

Obeldobel was sent to Stateville on May 11, 1936, by Judge John Lupe to serve one to ten years for appropriating $37,000 in the special assessment funds of Riverdale from 1927 to 1931. The losses were discovered in 1932 and Obeldobel evaded arrest for four years.

Another freed yesterday was Victor Schandorff, former bookkeeper at the Architects' club, 1801 Prairie avenue, who used the members' dues to bet on horse races. He was sentenced to serve 1 to 10 years in Stateville prison on April 28, 1937, by Judge Rudolph Desort.

Bandits' Lure Released.

Others paroled for the first time include:

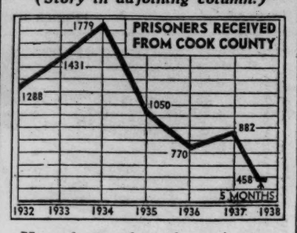
Katherine Brockman, sent to Dwight reformatory in 1933 for a 1 to 10 year term for acting as the "lure" in a robber gang.

Louis La Penna, serving a sentence in Joliet penitentiary for robbery with a gun, who figured in a plot to free thirty prisoners from the county jail in 1931 while awaiting transfer to the penitentiary.

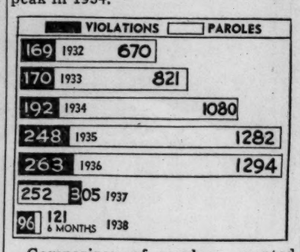
The "two-time" parolees returning to Cook county consist of a purse snatcher, a burglar, and two robbers.

Prisoners vs. Paroles

(Story in adjoining column.)



How the number of convicts sentenced to state prisons from Cook county has declined since reaching peak in 1934.



Comparison of numbers granted paroles and numbers of parole violators among Cook county prisoners. Parole scandals brought about a sharp reduction in clemency last year, causing violations to exceed in number the conditional releases granted.

Waukegan Boy, 7, Drowns While Swimming in Lake

KIDNAP-KILLER OF ROSS TO DIE NEXT THURSDAY

Slayer Is Calm as Court Fixes Sentence.

Federal Judge John P. Barnes yesterday fixed July 14 as the day on which John Henry Seadlund, the kidnap-slayer of Charles S. Ross, retired greeting card manufacturer, will die in the electric chair.

United States Marshal William H. McDonnell announced that the electrocution will take place in the Cook county jail a few minutes after midnight next Wednesday. For a time it appeared that Sherif John Toman would refuse the government the use of the jail because of an order from the attorney general in Washington barring Chicago newspapermen from the electrocution.

Later, however, Toman acceded to the federal order after talking to Washington officials by telephone. He was told the regulation applies to all federal executions.

Seadlund, who confessed that he kidnaped Ross and then killed his victim and his accomplice, James Atwood Gray, in their hide out near Spooner, Wis., last September, was calm as he went before the court for resentencing. He even smiled slightly as Judge Barnes fixed the date for his death.

Seadlund had been sentenced previously to die in the electric chair on April 19, but was granted a stay pending an appeal. On June 16 the United States Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed his conviction on the kidnap charge, and a short time later Seadlund's attorneys announced there would be no appeal to the United States Supreme court, as was first planned.

Seadlund, a former woodsman from Ironton, Minn., and Gray, kidnaped Ross on a lonely road west of Chicago. Seadlund later collected $50,000 in ransom and then killed Ross and Gray. He was captured at a Los Angeles race track in January.

TWO SONS SENT TO JOIN FATHER IN JOLIET PRISON

Two sons of a convict in the state penitentiary at Joliet were sentenced to long terms in the same prison by Chief Justice Cornelius J. Harrington in the Criminal court yesterday.

The defendants were Alexander Berdnick, 22 years old, who was sentenced to 1 to 10 years on each of three charges of robbery, and his brother, Nicholas, 29, who was sentenced to one year to life on each of three similar charges. The sentences are to run concurrently.

Max Berdnick, the father of the men, on May 4 was sentenced to 1 to 20 years in prison on a charge of incest. The family lived at 2432 North Kildare avenue. Alexander and Nicholas were arrested June 24 after they had stolen an automobile and robbed three drug stores.

CORONER'S JURY DECLARES WIDOW KILLED HERSELF

Al Westman of Centralia testified that Miss Britton, who was 29 years old, once told him she was going to wreck the Satterlee house and kill herself. Satterlee, who is estranged from his wife, said the pretty widow had threatened suicide several times.

Police Chief W. E. Kaelin testified that laboratory tests showed blood found on the wall of a stairway and on Miss Britton's dress was of the same type.

St. Paul, Minn., July 8.—[Special.]—South St. Paul police captured Robert McLeod, a farm hand, after a chase today and reported he confessed slaying his former employers, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Oswald, and a hired man, John Kujawa, on their farm near Osseo early yesterday.

Officers quoted McLeod as saying he slugged the victims with a hammer and then shot them.

Officers said McLeod, who is 28 years old, gave no motive for the slaying. However, Osseo authorities had been told the Oswalds had had trouble with McLeod and had released him June 20 after he had served a twenty day jail term for forgery.

The bodies of Mrs. Paul Oswald, 24 years old, a graduate of the University of Minnesota and formerly employed in Evanston, Ill.; her husband, and their hired man were found in the farm home yesterday afternoon by Oswald's father.

STATE RELEASES POLICEMAN IN DOUBLE KILLING

Policeman John F. Lewe, who shot and killed his wife, Phyllis, and Harry C. Johnson as the couple sat in an automobile at Wabash avenue and Randolph street, walked out of the Criminal court building a free man yesterday after Assistant State's Attorney Emmett Moynihan told Chief Justice Cornelius J. Harrington of the Criminal court that the state would not place any charges against him.

Lewe, who was exonerated by a coroner's jury Thursday, had been at liberty on bond of $20,000 since shortly after the shooting on June 7. At the coroner's hearing, Lewe testified that he saw Johnson reach for a gun, and that he shot in self-defense. Mrs. Lewe got in the way and was accidentally killed, he declared.

The body landed on a setback on the fifth floor level. He left a note addressed to his mother, Mrs. E. A. Britton of Sioux City, Ia., in which he told of domestic difficulties with his wife, Blanche, who left him recently. He is also survived by a daughter, Adele. Britton had been employed by THE TRIBUNE for three years and lived at 1213 North Dearborn street.

THE NEW IN NEW DEALISM.

It's a new deal, all right. A lot of things have been happening in Washington these last few years that never happened there before. And we don't mean the delightful informality of Sunday night supper at the White House.

There is, for instance, the exploitation of the White House for private gain. Mr. Roosevelt as President has sold the transcript of his official press conferences; he announced [four months ago] that his profits, which will be measured in five or six figures, would be devoted to some altruistic purpose, as yet unnamed. The announcement that he wasn't going to keep the money came only after a wave of protest had arisen all over the country.

The sale of his state papers by a President while in office is something new in our national history. It recalls another of Mr. Roosevelt's innovations: his autographing of copies of the Democratic campaign book. This precious volume, which without the President's signature might command 20 cents in a second hand book store, and with the autograph might bring $5 or $10, was sold to corporations at $250 the copy, for the benefit of the Democratic campaign fund. Mr. Roosevelt lent himself to this blatant evasion of the corrupt practices act which forbids campaign contributions by corporations. The list of purchasers, including corporations which feared to lose their business with the government, others which feared the cracker-downers, and still others which hoped to have the government for a customer provides another demonstration of the new deal in financial and political morality.

Mr. Roosevelt is, of course, not the only innovator in the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt sells platform appearances and writes books, magazine articles, and a syndicated column about life in the White House. She received fat fees for her radio appearances. The profits of all this activity for hire, which cannot be much less than the President's salary and may be larger, are devoted to charity, it has been announced. A ruling of the treasury department, rendered especially for Mrs. Roosevelt, exempts this income from federal tax.

Son Jimmy, the colonel of marines, gets a $10,000 job at the White House and a write-up in the Saturday Evening Post of his phenomenal business career. What he gets doesn't go to charity. There was nothing in the article to prove that Jimmy's clients got anything besides insurance protection for giving him their business, but the conclusion is inescapable that they thought it wouldn't lower their standing with the administration to see that Jimmy and not their regular insurance brokers got the commissions. Jimmy's clients included a broadcasting chain [whose station licenses run for only six months and may be withdrawn for no reason at all by the communications commission]; liquor dealers [whose business is under the constant regulation of the alcohol administration]; banks [which are subject to regulation by half a dozen government departments and bureaus; etc., etc.

The A. F. of L. complains that the labor board decides cases about the way John Lewis and the C. I. O. want them decided. John Lewis' miners' union gave and lent more than half a million dollars to the Roosevelt campaign fund and Mr. Roosevelt appointed the labor board. The superficial appearance of justice being sold to the highest bidder may be the result of a coincidence; again it may not. Mr. Lewis' indignation when occasionally he doesn't get exactly what he regards as his due indicates pretty clearly what he thought were the terms of the deal. He may have been mistaken.

It's a new deal, all right, as we said before. Congress has been corrupted with patronage and public works on a scale never before imagined. Senator Berry of Tennessee just missed getting a million or so for his phony marble quarries; fortunately there was at the time at least one active conscience on the TVA board. But Arthur Mullen, former Democratic national committeeman from Nebraska, with the aid of Senator Norris, won White House approval of the hydroelectric plants in Nebraska in the face of adverse reports from the government's own engineers. Mullen's bill called for the payment of a fat fee. Now that the plants have been built, the judgment of the engineers who rejected the scheme has been sustained. At that, they erred—on the side of optimism.

To buy Maine votes, the President authorized the Passamaquoddy power plant that was so cock-eyed that it has since been abandoned though millions had already been sunk in it; the Florida delegation was purchased, in part, with the ship canal, likewise abandoned. Montana was traded for the Fort Peck dam, the laughing stock of the engineering profession. Etc. Etc.

The pork barrel is an old story in American politics, but the new deal in pork barrels is on a scale so grandiose that the old name doesn't apply and no new one has been invented to meet the need.

Relief money intended to guard the poor from hunger and cold has been diverted to the rawest political uses, and that constitutes another new item in the public morality of this country. From Kentucky, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Iowa, and many other states circumstantial reports have come of this form of vote-buying. Aubrey Williams, deputy boss of WPA, told a delegation of his dependents not long ago how they should vote; when he was called to account by indignant Democrats he said he had been misquoted, but his subsequent speeches have been directed to the same end. This administration has become so calloused that it is no longer ashamed of its bribe-giving, just as it is no longer ashamed of its budgets and its crooked bookkeeping.

We have listed here only a few of the novelties introduced by the new deal. Any one who has followed public affairs in recent years could add dozens of similar items. It may safely be assumed that for every known example of cheating, profiteering, betrayal of trust, extortion, and bribery there are a hundred which remain hidden. Some day the whole mess will be exposed; but already enough is known to make the new deal and newdealism words of reproach. The time is coming, if it is not already here, when to call a man a new dealer will be equivalent to denouncing him as a grafter, a betrayer of the poor, a politician for profit.

NOT A TWO PANTS DEPRESSION.

The brighter man will nearly always not only get the jump on his less ingenious, less imaginative confreres, but the chances are he'll also cover his distance and be sitting in the shade with a cool drink before they even wake up. This has been notably illustrated by Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who saw an opportunity to create benefits out of the WPA which had been concealed from some of the most acquisitive go-getters in the country. He persuaded Mr. Harry Hopkins that his idea was sound and consequently the WPA has set aside 10 million dollars to purchase surplus stocks of men's and boys' apparel for distribution in relief.

Mr. Hillman thus has the satisfaction not only of knowing that tens of thousands of American citizens will now only need a haircut to appear among the well dressed of the population but that the surplus stocks will be reduced and many of his garment workers will get employment. A manufacturer who is overloaded with tuxedos has not been able to declare himself in on the distribution, the WPA having suddenly become class conscious.

Corrington Gill, the assistant WPA administrator who is making selections from the surplus stocks, has also ruled against the more giddy and flashy models, declaring against the checks and stripes favored by snappy dressers who like to feel that they are stepping out when they hit the boulevards and turn into the night clubs. Mr. Gill may be overlooking a chance to step up the national morale, but such is his conservative nature that he favors only the more conservative man-of-family type of apparel.

Furthermore, it has been ruled that no two pants suits shall be purchased and distributed. More one pants suits than two pants suits can be bought with the money set aside, and moreover it is the idea that this is not going to be a two pants depression. The administrators refuse, quite naturally, to concede that in spite of all 5½ billion dollars additional money can do, one pair of pants will be out at the seat and ragged at the ends before the occupant can hope to get another pair.

We have been hearing a good deal about these purely emergency measures for nearly six years now and still the population is looking to the government for its pants. Mr. Hillman, however, must be credited with one bright idea and among those who probably envy him is David Dubinsky of the Ladies' Garment Workers, who will hear from the women of the family when the head of it comes home in his new suit of clothes.

A JOB FOR YOUNG REPUBLICANS.

Republican prospects are improved as local and national elections in many sections of the country demonstrate. The Democratic ranks are split and the cleavage grows wider and more embittered every day. The Republicans can count on the 17 million who voted for Landon, other millions have been won back to the fold, and an understanding with the stalwart Democrats is within the probabilities.

As the outlook grows brighter it becomes of increasing importance to guard the party against the old gang which brought it to deserved defeat. The old leaders have been repudiated. Most of them had abandoned hope of returning to positions of influence. A few are showing signs of attempting a comeback.

Their ambitions must be squelched if the party is to fulfill its mission. Here is an opportunity for the Young Republican organizations to make their strength and influence count. Gangsters and ward heelers must be kept out of Republican counsels. The Young Republicans can, and we are confident will, keep the party free of these noxious elements.

BEANS BECOME BIG BUSINESS.

[Christian Science Monitor.]

The devotee of the traditional Saturday night New England baked bean supper may at times be perplexed by the smallness of the modern product and wonder whatever became of the old-fashioned navy bean that used to decorate his plate. In the explanation lies the story of how American farm life has been revolutionized and one of the reasons why many an individual farmer has found it much more difficult to make a living.

The old-fashioned white beans that did so well in the gravelly soils of such states as New York and Michigan succumbed to plant pests. But the Michigan agricultural experiment station developed a pea bean in 1913 which proved resistant to attacks, and this has now taken over practically the entire commercial market, while another and larger resistant type, called Great Northern, produced mainly in Idaho, has become popular for home cooking.

If one should drive down the famous El Camino Real, from San Francisco to Los Angeles, he would pass miles of farm lands in the Salinas river valley—a land which was once a desert but which is now carpeted with green, each irrigated field bordered by waving eucalyptus trees. There is not a farmhouse in sight. Every one of the fields grows beans and they are owned by corporations or wealthy individuals who live in great cities miles away. Permanent employés are few. Cheap seasonal labor harvests the crop, which is marketed at low cost through a single channel. Thus mass production methods permit California beans to undersell those from nearer fields in eastern markets. Like wheat growing, bean production has become big business.

Cherry Time.

In season when cherries were ripe our house, half hidden in cherry trees, was a Mecca for those who had no trees, and the neighbors came to pick on shares. The double row of early Mays and Richmonds, sheltered by the silver poplar windbreak, made an aile of greenish twilight where the pickers worked. Carrie was tall and quite the young lady and our private envy because she owned a side saddle and riding habit; Hattie was sturdy and a good climber. There was an improvised table under the trees of boards laid across upturned barrels and we put our pans and pails of picked fruit here—it looked like a fair. When we stopped to rest we sat on the trampled grass where twigs of the fallen cherries were snared and ate blackcaps from the raspberry bramble, peering through the drooping branches into the sun-smitten garden; when the breeze stirred we heard the mower in the south field and we talked and played with the long stems of timothy, purple with bloom. Good-by, Naperville,

And the planners and leaders of peace
In a broken down, fear ridden, hate torn world;
Good-by, North Central college,
Whose doors opened wide in welcome
To pilgrims from near by and far,
Who came in search of the clew
To brotherhood living and loving.

In the warmth of your homes and hearts,
In the lap of your beauty,
In the care of your kindness,
We learned and prayed and hoped,
And shared, one with another,
And harvested a mighty dream
Against the lean seasons ahead,
The drought in men's souls.

Now, how shall the dream be remembered,
Kept fresh in the heart?

PATIENCE NEEDED WITH CHOREA.

THE term chorea—in common parlance, St. Vitus' dance—originally was applied to the hysterical dancing mania which, during the middle ages, affected the inhabitants of many parts of continental Europe. One such group was ordered to seek refuge at the chapel of St. Vitus at Zabern. It is related that all who entered were relieved of the affliction. Two centuries later Thomas Sydenham gave to the disease the name "chorea" from a Greek word meaning dancing. This was perhaps unfortunate as the malady for several centuries has been associated only with purposeless twitchings.

When moderately severe the victim has no control over certain muscular movements. For example, on carrying a cup to the lips, there may occur a sudden relaxation of the fingers, causing the vessel to drop. Walking and speech are impaired and, in some instances, sufferers are utterly unable to help themselves. Mental excitement brings on increased jerking, grimacing, and the like, while during sleep—as a rule—the spasmodic gestures cease. Many patients will show some mental changes as evidenced by exhibitions of impatience, even anger. By and large it may be said emotional stability is decreased, as tears or laughter may come at the slightest provocation. The ailment seldom is seen under the age of 5 and becomes less and less common beyond the age of 15.

Fever is rare and this is urged by some writers as an argument against its rheumatic origin. Nevertheless, rheumatism and chorea have been associated frequently as cause and effect. Parents may note that the first signs of the illness followed a severe tonsilitis or scarlet fever. In fact, any infection calling forth the body's powers for recovery may predispose to the trouble.

The average duration is about six weeks, although some minor symptoms may persist for two or three months longer. Now and then there are recurrences even after a lapse of a few years. Should a second episode come on the heart must be watched carefully as this is a period which is fraught with great danger to the pumping organ.

As every mother, who has nursed a child through such a seizure knows, quiet is indispensable. Considerable care must be exercised so that the youngster cannot injure himself. Occasionally movements are so violent as to result in bruises, breaks in the skin, even infections. Because of mumbled speech the patient may have difficulty in making his wants known and every desire should be met immediately to avoid agitation. If muscle contractions are frequent, warm wet packs will prove soothing.

Sedative drugs often are necessary, and most physicians will resort to bromides, or chloral, or both in combination. Other sedatives have been employed such as nirvanol, and many reports indicate that the chorelc antics will stop within three weeks under this type of management. Great skill is demanded in the administration of the drug, as it may not affect all alike and the dose requires critical adjustment. The fever treatment, that is, raising the temperature of the body to 105 degrees Fahrenheit or even slightly higher, has been helpful. This is accomplished through the use of typhoid vaccine or by artificial [electrical] means.

Fortunately, the outlook is favorable for recovery, although second attacks are not uncommon and some children will suffer as many as five distinct encounters with what seems to be complete recovery during each interval. This emphasizes the importance of providing an outdoor life for every boy and girl, building reserve as promptly as possible. Infection—wherever found—should be eliminated. This includes tonsils, teeth, sinuses, and the urinary tract. Good food, vitamins, and plenty of leafy vegetables will be needed.

EMOTIONS AND AILMENTS.

D. R. writes:

1. Could an emotional upset later react and manifest itself in chest pangs and swelling of the left side of the chest? Or is this purely angina pectoris?

2. What causes very rapid heart beat, and can it be overcome?

REPLY.

1. Angina pectoris is not a disease in itself. The pain is caused by changes which have occurred in the heart or the large blood vessels—chiefly the latter. Emotional upsets aggravate the condition, but cannot be considered the cause. The swelling you speak of is not characteristic of angina.

2. Rapid heart rhythm is frequently nervous in origin. In the absence of disease it may be disregarded. Many toxins are causative, however, such as excessive use of tobacco.

THINK LESS OF SELF.

J. G. writes: Whenever I converse with some one a feeling of inferiority comes over me. For this reason I try to avoid people. At times I am listless and lazy and have a tendency to look on the dark side of things. Has this affliction anything to do with an insufficient working of the thyrold gland, or is it due to something else?

REPLY.

It may be that you can determine definitly by means of a metabolic test. What you need to acquire is the ability to become interested in others; to think less of yourself. There are many excellent books dealing with mental hygiene, and we will be glad to send a list of these if stamped, addressed envelope accompanies request.

FUNCTIONAL BLEEDING.

M. G. writes:

1. What is meant by "functional bleeding"?

2. Does the condition have any relation to gland trouble?

REPLY.

1. Functional means without lesion or change in structure. Bleeding from an apparently healthy organ would be termed functional, such as menstruation.

2. If the glandular system is out of order some trouble exists, and bleeding—as a consequence—cannot be called functional. It is true that changes in the blood or in the glandular system may predispose to hemorrhage.

APPLY WHITE VASELINE.

M. G. writes: I have a boy, aged 7, who gets frequent nosebleeds. His nose is very scabby. What can I do to stop the bleeding? What can I put in his nose to keep it from getting dry?

REPLY.

Teach him to 'et his nose alone. A bit of white vaseline [half the size of a pea] may be inserted in each nostril once daily. This will melt at body temperature and prevent drying of the discharges. If bleeding persists your physician should be consulted, as some blood condition may be responsible.

HAVE BLOOD TESTED.

A. W. writes: The whites of my eyes are stained yellow. Is this a bad sign?

REPLY.

Have the blood tested for bilirubin. This may be a symptom of some variety of jaundice. Very slight discolorations of the sclera are of little significance.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO.—Japan's shipping business, which earned a net profit of more than 100 million dollars last year, will be augmented shortly by two 27,000 ton trans-Pacific passenger ships, three 16,000 ton liners for the European service, and more than twenty freighters and tramps for cargo service.

The Japanese assert that excessively large liners are uneconomical on the Pacific and, being the only operators of ships on this ocean who are making money at present, they should know.

The keel of the first of the vessels for the European service will be laid this summer. All three will be completed by 1940, well before the opening of the Olympic games which are scheduled to be held in Tokio.

An innovation will be air conditioning throughout, a thing which the Japanese claim never has been done before. Even in the Queen Mary and other trans-Atlantic floating palaces only the dining rooms and salons are air conditioned, it is stated. The reason for air conditioning all cabins on the new Japanese ships is the intense heat in the Indian ocean.

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the largest Japanese shipping company, recently placed three 7,000 ton vessels on the European passenger and freight service and will lay the keels of four 4,000 tonners for the Seattle service and two 11,000 ton ships for the Australian run before long. It is with ships of this size that the Japanese have been earning most of their profits. In all, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's present building program involves twenty-one vessels totaling 220,000 tons.

The government, it is understood, will grant a subsidy of about 10 million dollars for the building of the two 27,000 ton trans-Pacific ships which together will cost about twice this amount and which will take two years to build. Whether these ships will be profit making is a matter of considerable conjecture.

They will constitute Japan's ace liners in size and speed. They will be slightly larger than the largest vessel on the Pacific today, the Canadian Pacific Line's Empress of Japan, which is 26,000 tons. The largest American trans-Pacific ship, the President Coolidge, is 21,900 tons. The biggest Japanese craft is the Chichibu Maru, 17,500 tons.

Japan today ranks third among the maritime countries of the world. There is, however, a wide disparity between the number and tonnage of her merchantmen and those of Britain and the United States, which stand first and second, respectively, with 20 million tons and 12 million tons. Japan only has 4,200,000 tons of merchantmen afloat and is only slightly ahead of Norway and Germany, which rank fourth and fifth.

RECEIVERSHIP.

Chicago, July 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Who is responsible for a bill [against a building] that was contracted for before the building went into receivership?

2 The company was advised by the person who has [3] the equity in the building, and who also made the contract, to collect from the receiver.

4. Does this fact and the receivership act release the responsibility?

5. Where or how can a person obtain the latest laws pertaining to receiverships? We have no lawyer.

6. Are we entitled to monthly statements from the receiver, or what rights have we, if any?

7. The court appointed the receiver about two years ago and nothing has been done since. G. P.

1. Depends on the nature of the bill and the nature of the receivership.

2. It is not clear what company you mean.

3 If you dealt with an individual you were entitled to obtain a judgment and collect out of his assets, if that is what you mean to ask.

4. Probably not.

5. Receiverships are controled by case law, more largely than by statute. We know of no book appropriate for laymen. If your claim is substantial you should employ an attorney.

6. No, his obligation is to report to the court rather than to the creditor.

7. If the facts warant an account, you should make a motion in court to that effect. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SHARE IN ESTATE.

Peoria, Ill., July 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My father died six months ago in California where he was working. His birthplace and residence up until twelve years ago was in Illinois. He leaves much real estate in Illinois. Upon examining the will I find he did not mention me but left everything to his wife [second]. I am a child by a former marriage. This second wife is living and she separated my mother and father when I was 2 years old.

1. My aunts and uncles on my father's side insist on me trying to break the will as they know she used influence to get him to make such a will. They say I can break it.

2. An attorney tells me I cannot.

3 Isn't there some way I can put in a claim against her or the estate? There are no children by their union.

4. Would it be advisable to go to the judge that helped draw up the will and tell him? L. M.

1. It is so natural for a husband to leave his estate to his wife that it would take strong proof to set aside such a will on the claim of undue influence.

2. If he has gone over the facts at first hand he is in a better position to advise you than we are.

3. We see no basis for such a claim.

4. It does not seem likely that this would do any good, but the only way to make sure is to try.

WHERE THE SALES TAX GOES.

Chicago, July 7.—Your correspondent, "Puzzled," writes from Blue Island, Ill.: "I'm told that only ½ of that 3 cent sales tax is devoted to relief. What about the other 2 cents? Do they go entirely to the support of our 80 million dollar a year state government?"

Our state government cost the taxpayers $187,272,501, $171,270,681, and $215,137,697 for the years ending respectively June 30, 1935, 1936, and 1937, and not 80 millions, as "Puzzled" states.

Sales tax collections were 41.6 millions, 64.2 millions, and 77 million dollars for the respective years 1935, 1936, and 1937. The sales tax was expended as follows [in million dollars]:

General revenue	11.9	9.3	24.68
Common schools	10.5	12.7	13
*Relief, emergency	9.1	33.5	29.9

WHICH FUND PAYS FOR THE TRIP?

Chicago, July 5.—A TRIBUNE editorial states that Mr. Roosevelt, speaking as the head of the Democratic party and not, he said, as President, reveals that the purpose of the campaign which he begins next Thursday is to "cut out" certain members of the party.

The President has been insistent that the people understand he is not doing this as President of the United States, apparently because he fully realizes that a proper President ought to be ashamed of what he is doing.

The question naturally arises as to how he is financing this unpresidential wreaking of vengeance on those who disagree with him. On his forthcoming trip just which of the privileges, perquisites, emoluments, and other benefits of the taxpayers' money, which he receives as President of the United States, is he using in this private capacity for his own private ends? Is he, for example, paying for his train with his own money? The taxpayers have a right to demand a statement from him on this score.

TAXPAYER.

AN UNEXPECTED RAISE.

Chicago, July 5.—Maybe it would be a good thing if all employers followed the example of my boss, Mr. J. Laadt. Right in the middle of his slack season [he sells his own publication, a simplified bookkeeping system for the small merchant] he ups and gives all the employés a totally unexpected raise. Noting the puzzled looks he explained, "Frankly, business is in a slump and everybody mopes around in a pessimistic frame of mind. I figure a raise puts the recipient in a happier frame of mind and tends to start the ball rolling toward recovery. The average working man is a free spender and money in his hands doesn't stagnate, but flows back into circulation, creating a cycle that can't help but bring things back to normal."

His opinion, I am sure we will all agree, is a worthy one. HAPPY.

BETTER THAN IDLING.

Chicago, July 4.—To B. S. W., who complains of the ice cream peddlers: If I had such delicate ears as you I would find a nice quiet road in the country and make my home there. For every boy you find ringing his ice cream bell there is another getting into trouble because he has nothing to do. Just think if all the boys selling ice cream would suddenly lose their jobs you would hear the policeman's whistle and siren instead of the much pleasanter ice cream bell, trying to catch these boys who had nothing to do. L. C. K. JR.

"IN OLD CHICAGO'S" ERRORS.

Chicago, July 4.—In THE TRIBUNE today Samuel E. Erickson has found some faults with the movie, "In Old Chicago," but one of the most glaring errors he overlooked. In one scene a whole flock of patrol wagons is used in a raid. The first patrol wagon came into use in the early '80s, as without the telephone such a wagon was not of much use. There was a covered wagon called the "Black Maria," which was used to transfer prisoners from court to jail but that had no name painted on its side. The telephone was invented in 1876.

In the picture a man was apprehended for illegal registration. There was no registration of voters in 1871. The voter handed in his ballot and gave his name. That is the way I remember seeing my father vote during the decade of the '70s. The first system of registration was known as the "Australian ballot," as I remember it, and that was introduced into this country long after 1871. To stuff the ballot in the early days men roved the city and voted under different names in all the precincts that they could cover. LONSDALE GREEN.

ANOTHER EYEWITNESS.

Metropolis, Ill., July 4.—The exceptions which Samuel E. Erickson takes to the motion picture, "In Old Chicago," will find a ready response in the memory of any eyewitness of the Chicago fire. There was no such rioting and fighting as is pictured in the script; but, while it was everybody for himself to get away from the fire with all of his earthly belongings he could take, it was all done in an orderly manner. I was there.

If the authors could have captured the scenes of that day, as "truth is stranger than fiction," they might have given us a play instead of a lot of bunk which is an offense to any one who saw the real thing. A. J. G.

NOT A MISREPRESENTATION.

Chicago, July 5.—Evidently Samuel E. Erickson has wasted his life looking at movie pictures, judging from his article in Monday's TRIBUNE.

In the first place the picture "In Old Chicago" was not a misrepresentation of facts. It was not supposed to be an entirely historical picture. When they advertised this picture they stated that it was based on a true fact but it had fictional additions to make it pleasing to the public. The producers were helped by the Chicago Historical society, which knows more about the early history of Chicago than any one else.

Garden Benefit, Debut Dance on Day's Calendar

BY JUDITH CASS.

THERE is enough going on in Lake Forest today to keep the entire village and its north shore neighbors occupied from morning until late hours, starting with the annual garden party for the Lake Bluff orphanage at Mrs. Harry M. McIntosh's Lake Forest home, Belorme, and ending with Mr. and Mrs. John Adams Chapmans' dinner-dance at the Onwentsia for their debutante daughter, Miss Carolyn Chapman.

Each of the last three days of next week are to be even more hectic and gay, however, for Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden, his wife, Crown Princess Louise, and his son, Prince Bertil, and members of the royal party which is touring the United States will be in Lake Forest. A number of the debutantes and their elder sisters who will be dancing with local beaux at Miss Chapman's party tonight at the club will be hoping for a dance with Prince Bertil next Saturday at a party Mrs. Leslie Wheeler is giving at the club for him.

While the young people are dining with Prince Bertil next Saturday Mrs. Wheeler and other close friends of Mr. and Mrs. William McCormick Blair will go to the Blairs for a dinner they are giving for the crown prince and princess. Mr. and Mrs. Blair will have the royal couple for their house guests during their three day stay here. Mrs. Wheeler will be Prince Bertil's hostess.

Consul Informed of Arrival Plans.

It was uncertain until yesterday if the crown prince would be well enough to come to Chicago to attend the Swedish tercentenary celebrations, but word was received by Gosta Oldenburg, Swedish consul, that the crown prince and princess and their party, including the Swedish minister to the United States, Wollmar F. Bostrom, and Mme. Bostrom would arrive on Thursday from Washington. Prince Bertil and his entourage will come that morning from Detroit.

Because the Blairs are not sure whether the crown prince will be up to much entertaining, they are having just a small dinner for him and the princess on the night they arrive. Mrs. Farwell Winston is giving a dinner the same night for Prince Bertil, to which Miss Anne Winston, a debutante of last season, is inviting some of her contemporaries.

The only other Lake Forest party for the visitors will be a luncheon Mrs. Howard Linn is giving in her home next Friday for Crown Princess Louise.

Friday and Saturday have been set aside as New Sweden tercentenary days and the royal visitors have a full program. At 12:30 o'clock on Friday there will be a reception for the crown prince in gallery 50 of the Art institute, at which Chauncey McCormick, vice president of the institute, will make a welcoming speech. Mr. Oldenburg will speak on behalf of the tercentenary committee. The crown prince and his party then will tour the institute. The public is invited.

Stage Parade Next Saturday.

On Friday night there will be a banquet at the Stevens. Saturday there will be a luncheon at the Swedish club for the crown prince and his son and a breakfast at the Palmer house for the crown princess. Then, for those who love a parade, will come the highlight of the two day celebration, the parade of the royal party, escorted by the regular army, the National Guard, and the American Legion from Monroe street and Michigan avenue to Soldiers' field, where it is expected that 40,000 Swedish-Americans will hold a massmeeting. The crown prince will speak and there will be children's dances and Swedish songs to close the official program. Proceeds of the meeting will go to the Historical museum in Philadelphia.

According to the final arrangements for housing the royal party in Lake Forest, Mrs. Wheeler will have as her guests also Col. Oscar N. Solbert, marshal of the tour, and Mrs. Solbert. Nils Rudebeck, master of the household of the crown prince, and Nils Millar, secretary of the household of the crown prince, will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Linn.

Arrange Entertainment for Early Arrivals.

Miss Brita Steuch, lady-in-waiting to Princess Louise, and Lieut. Col. Gunnar Ekeroth, military aide-de-camp to the crown prince, will stay with Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson. Count Nils Fersen Gyldenstolpe, chamberlain, will be the William H. Mitchells' guest.

Gunnar Hagglof of the Swedish foreign office, private secretary to the crown prince, and Dr. Harald Ernberg, physician to the crown prince, will be with the Philip D. Armours. The Lester Armours will be hosts to the Bostroms.

Members of the Swedish delegation who are arriving in advance of the royal party and who are staying at the Bismarck and Drake hotels will be guests at a dinner at the Swedish club tonight. The party is to be an informal one. The advance arrivals include Gov. Bernhard Erikson, Gen. and Mrs. C. R. J. Akerman—he is chairman of the city council of Stockholm—Dr. and Mrs. Ernst Jungen, and Miss Ulla and Miss Kerstin Johansson, whose father, Albin Johansson, is president of the Swedish cooperative movement.

Chapman Dance to Be Informal.

The party that Mr. and Mrs. Chapman are giving at the Onwentsia tonight is to be an informal, country one, for they have invited only their Lake Forest neighbors and young people to meet Miss Chapman. Later in the season Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will give a larger party for the debutante, who will return to her studies at Vassar in September.

Two of Miss Chapman's sisters,

One Pattern—Two Dresses

WOMAN'S AND MISS' FROCK.

Two charming and simple summer dresses may be made with one pattern, our offering today. This dress is so unassuming in its lines that it suits any figure type. Whether you are tall and slim or short and plump you will find this design flatters you. The version shown at the left makes good use of scalloping. Notice that it lends a distinctive finish to neckline, sleeves, pocket, and the entire front of the dress. Linens, cottons, and wash silks all make up well. In this design plain shades are, perhaps, preferable, with a monogram for the extra touch on the pocket. The pattern for this is No. E-11012, and is available for 10 cents extra.

The other version of the dress will, perhaps, appeal greatly to matrons. There is the scalloped and contrasting collar on a simple dress with plain sleeves and a slide fastener down the front. Prints are especially acceptable for this version.

Style No. 2715 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3⅜ yards of 39 inch material with 5 yards of binding.

Idleness on a Train Trip Apt to Irk a Child

By GLADYS BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

There's no nicer place to read than on a railroad train—or no nicer time to just sit and gaze or think. But you have to forego those indulgences if you're traveling with children. If you're willing to do that and a little planning besides you can make of traveling a pleasant adventure.

Here are some suggestions:

What flies past the window has possibilities for conversation and interest.

Books to be looked at, or read quietly or read aloud are always a standby.

A little box of special notepaper or postcards and pencil and stamp offer a definite occupation after the first edge is off embarking and getting settled.

A little personal traveling kit will delight young femininity, while a tiny doll's trunk and miniature toilet articles or traveling outfit will enthrall them. Your small son's furry animals might go along, even clad perhaps in a little new jacket and carrying a tiny packet of lunch.

Does this sound like a lot of trouble? It isn't. But if you're in doubt, compare it with the result of complete idleness—a distracted mother and irritable, restless children—and it will seem like nothing at all

Winter Club Will Hold Annual Splash Party Today

The annual splash party of the Winter club in Lake Forest will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon with the usual races and diving contests on the program. Joan Mitchell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Herbert Mitchell, will defend her title as senior girl diving champion. Hixon Glore, who won the boys' event last year, will not compete today because he has passed the age limit.

Women Give Free Concert at Grant Park

BY CECIL SMITH.

The Woman's Symphony orchestra made its second appearance of the summer last night at the eighth of the sixty-seven free outdoor concerts in Grant park. As at the orchestra's first program last Saturday, the conductor was Rudolph Ganz. Margot Rebeil, soprano, was soloist.

Departing temporarily from the standard fare constituting the bulk of the program, Mr. Ganz conducted as a semi-novelty the "Symphonic Intermezzo" by Florence Grandland Galajikian of Maywood. The work has had previous hearings both in Orchestra hall and at the University of Chicago. It has also been given by Eugene Goossens, Willem Van Hoogstraten, Ebba Sundstrom and Frank Black after it had won a prize award in 1932.

The musical interest of the piece is somewhat less commanding than the technical competence with which it is orchestrated. It always sounds well, though its thematic material is conventional and not a little sentimental. If she were writing it today Mrs. Galajikian would no doubt cast it in more concise form and omit some of its redundancies.

Miss Rebeil classifies herself as a coloratura soprano, but her performance of Mozart's florid "Alleluia" indicated that she is less at home in ornamental, rapid music than in the smoother lyric flow of Pamina's aria from "The Magic Flute." Her style is graced by many evidences of a patrician approach to music, especially in the elegance of some of her phrasing.

The intractability of her voice in fast passages, combined with a tendency to imitate Lily Pons' habit of singing with the mere glittering surface of her voice, indicate that she would do well to give up coloratura aspirations and concentrate upon the lyric singing for which she is well qualified.

Critic Praises Mozart Playing at Ravinia Fete

BY EDWARD BARRY.

During his entire two week engagement as guest conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Ravinia park, Artur Rodzinski is presenting only one large scale classical work. That work, the Mozart G minor symphony, was played last evening before an audience which was not quite as large as the importance of the occasion and the excellence of the performance demanded.

Here was Mozart playing characterized by serene line and by delicate balance of parts. Phrases were not without a personal inflection and an often moving expressiveness of their own, but they fell obediently into the larger scheme of things which the symphony as a whole becomes.

Effects of color and of dynamics represented no yielding to a temptation to revel too deeply in the glory of the moment actually at hand. On the contrary, they were made to constitute exquisite details of an architectural conception characterized by sanity and restraint throughout.

The woodwind phrase which immediately precedes the first movement's recapitulation boasted a quite other worldly delicacy. Another effect calling for some sort of particular mention was the exquisite broadening which the conductor permitted where the first violins, in the coda of the same movement, quote a reminiscence of the principal theme.

The orchestra achieved an intoxicating effect when the first theme of the piece's final division rose so exuberantly through its octave and two-thirds compass. But if one were listening for episodes as such, rather than relating them to the movement as a whole, the delivery of the ethereal second subject would have wiped away any memory of the first.

Richard Strauss has proven again and again during his long creative life that a white hot imagination is a catalytic agent potent enough to effect the fusion of music with almost any sort of nonmusical matter. In "Thus Spake Zarathustra," played just before the intermission, music has not only digested a heavy philosophical morsel but has remained [or become] excellent music [of its somewhat bombastic type].

Any blatancy which it possesses was forgotten in the terrific drive of its performance. Like a god marshaling his thunderbolts to insure the greatest possible effectiveness for his arsenal, Mr. Rodzinski maneuvered the great orchestral masses of the tone poem into climaxes which proved that even now, in 1938, a relatively early work of Strauss can stun even a thoroughly experienced audience by means of the sheer splendor of its instrumental dress.

Musicians, Ravinia Backers Play Ball Game Today

The ball field and grandstands at Ravinia Park as well as the pavilion will be crowded today, for, in addition to the evening concert, the Fiddling Fielders and the Non-Profiteers will be playing a ball game at 4 o'clock. One admission to the park covers both the ball game and the concert. Members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and members of the executive committee of the Ravinia festival are the opposing teams.

Dr. Artur Rodzinski of Cleveland will conduct the orchestra tonight and tomorrow afternoon.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

The perfume sensation of the year now has a companion piece, a cologne that echoes its blithe fragrance. The perfume was one of the best sellers at Christmas time so it's a certainty many of you must own it.

The bottle was an extravagant, amusing little replica of a dressmaker's dummy in glass. The perfume itself was named for the magenta shade that made fashion history last season. It was a daring package, but there was nothing daring about the perfume, which is smart and sophisticated, but not vulgar.

The cologne is destined for the same sort of stardom the perfume enjoys. The package is the knockout you'd expect—the bottle suggestive of that same glass dressmaker's dummy, with a brilliant magenta cap, encased, of course, in a box in that same startling color. It's made and packaged in France and is just as de luxe as you'd expect a product straight from the Place Vendome to be.

This is known as a double strength cologne, which means that the perfume it contains is pretty highly concentrated. It can be used during hot weather as a daytime perfume. The scent itself is best described as a most seductive one, but it is not heavy. There is an amberish note in it—particularly in this cologne version—that makes it ideal for hot weather use.

This comes in a couple of sizes and will be, unless we miss our guess, one of the outstanding gift items this summer. The bottle has one of those highly satisfactory tiny rubber stoppers which foils evaporation. This—which seems to be a French inspiration—is a good idea.

WEDDING

The wedding of Miss Celeste O'Hara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. O'Hara of 6458 Greenview avenue, to Paul D. Oesterle, son of J. George Oesterle of Philadelphia, Pa., will take place at 10 o'clock this morning at St. Ignatius church.

Mrs. S. Prentice Porter Is Arlington Fan

Mrs. S. Prentice Porter's interest in horses is not confined to the hunting fields for she is to be found at Arlington Park nearly every day during the racing season.

Luncheon Parties

With the Hyde Park Stakes as the featured race this afternoon at Arlington Park, social circles again will gather for luncheons at the Post and Paddock club. Mrs. Thomas E. Wilson, George E. Van Hagen, George A. Ranney, Silas H. Strawn, Mrs. Donald R. McLennan, and Mrs. Thomas Howell have made reservations for luncheon parties.

One of the most attractive family groups seen at the races yesterday was made up of Mrs. Temple Buell of Denver and her four children, Callae, Beverly, Buddy, and Mardi. Mrs. Buell wore a blue frock to match her eyes. She is visiting her mother, Mrs. Harry M. McIntosh, in Lake Forest. Mrs. Van Hagen and Mrs. Roy Carruthers, who are daily visitors at the track, congratulated each other on picking the winners in the daily double. Miss Pauline Palmer, Mrs. Michael Cudahy, and Mrs. John J. Borland II. were choosing horses together, as was another feminine trio, but even a more youthful one, Blissy King, Helen Niblack, and Ann Porter.

Widow Writes of Gratitude for Free Ice Help

BY DORIS LOCKERMAN.

Yesterday, in a poignant letter of gratitude from the west side, came the first of this season's evidence of the worthy work of the free ice fund.

"I can't tell you how thankful I am for the ice tickets" a widow wrote. "I have the whole third floor here which is the attic in the house. When the sun beats down on the roof and in the windows, I feel I cannot endure it, but I am thankful that I am not shut up in one room. I am thankful for all I have. Ice is such a wonderful thing. I thank you again."

Several contributions to the ice fund were received yesterday. Two of them were anonymous, and a third desired only that his initials be used in acknowledgment. They were:

Anonymous [2]	$ 4.00
C. B. B.	10.00
Mrs. Norman S. Florsheim	10.00
Mamie F. Strauss	2.00
	$ 26.00
Previously acknowledged	91.88
	$117.88

The following gifts were received for the Camp Algonquin fund:

Anonymous	$ 2.00
G. E. B.	25.00
C. B. B.	10.00
Mrs. Norman S. Florsheim	10.00
	$ 47.00
Previously acknowledged	482.16
	$529.16

It costs only $1 to keep a baby's milk fresh for one week, and slightly less than that to preserve fresh vegetables for the diet of an aged or cardiac patient.

A child may spend two happy weeks at Algonquin for $9.10, and a gift of $25.20 will pay for the country vacation of a poor mother and her two children. Each contribution, regardless of its size, will be welcomed, and gratefully acknowledged in these columns.

Goodman Theater Players Open Woodstock Festival

A summer theater festival opened with the midwestern première of Ferenc Molnar's "Olympia" last evening at the opera house in Woodstock, Ill. The cast from the Goodman Memorial theater will repeat performances tonight and tomorrow evening.

Looking at Hollywood
By Ed Sullivan

Preview.

Hollywood, Cal., July 8.—Carthay circle was a yellow rhododendron of light, with petals of electricity. Sleek, shiny limousines purred up to the curb with the great ladies and the great lords of celluloid, and as each car deposited its celebrated passengers, there was an ecstatic murmur of "Oh-h-h's" and "Ah-h's from the movie fans who strained at the ropes that held them back from their idols.

Nero kept the populace amused and diverted by tossing Christians to the lions in the amphitheater. Hollywood keeps them amused by letting them look at the movie stars. Grandstands groaned under the weight of the movie fans, straining forward for a glimpse of Norma Shearer, the femme star of "Marie Antoinette." A patter of sound, like dominoes falling against each other, started the applause. "There she is," they yelled, and Norma, smiling and waving her hand, swept past as photographers ran ahead of her, popping their electric bulbs like fireflies.

Perhaps Norma Shearer was thinking back to the flat at 57th street and 9th avenue in New York City, where she and her sister lived with their mother for $7.50 a week back in 1920.

From the interior of the Carthay Circle theater came the buzz of voices in greeting, Hollywood greetings: "Dar-r-ling. So-o good to see you again." . . . "You look perfectly fetching, m'dear." . . . "Nor-r-r-ma, dar-r-r-ling!" And over the babble of voices came the sound of music projected through the horns behind the screen.

The sound horns and all of the gadgets had been installed by Douglas Shearer, head of the M-G-M laboratories. When his name flashed on the screen maybe Norma Shearer was thinking back to the days in Montreal when she and her sister and young Doug Shearer wrestled on the floor of the parlor. Later when things looked pretty black in New York City it was Doug who sent them $10 a week so that they could pay the rent.

Or the music might have reminded her of the time when the Shearer family, to get money for the trip to New York, sold the family piano and by shrewd bargaining got $400. Or perhaps the music reminded her of the days in Montreal when she played the piano and demonstrated popular songs in a music store.

Celebrities jostled each other to get close enough to shake her hand at the Carthay Circle theater. I wonder if Norma was smiling inwardly at the recollection of the day when she went to Florenz Ziegfeld's office with a letter of introduction.

"Sing?" asked Ziggie. She said no. "Dance?" he asked. She said no.

"Can't do anything for you, I'm afraid," he said, "if you can't sing or dance. Wait a moment. Goldie, get two tickets for tonight's show for Miss—what's your name?" So she saw the Ziegfeld Follies that night with her sister. It was wonderful.

Now the preview had ended. "Darrling, you were superb-b, simply divine." Glamor girls were throwing their arms around her in the aile. "Norma, you never screened so enchantingly in all your life. Dar-r-ling, I'm simply green with envy."

It was conceivable that Norma was thinking back to the great day in New York City when she met D. W. Griffith, then one of the head men of celluloid. It meant so much, that meeting with Griffith. One word from him, and all the worry and anxiety of eking out a living would be ended. "I'd advise you to go back to your home town," said Griffith. "You are not for movies. You wouldn't screen well. Go back home. You'll be happier in the long run."

Now they were in front of the theater again. Lights, applause, the monotone of crowd noises. The squeal of horns as the sleek, shiny limousines rolled up to the theater in response to the trumpeted cries of the starter: "Mr. Mayer's car," "Mr. Tyrone Power's car," "Miss Lombard's cars," "Mr. Hornblow's car," "Mr. Thal—Miss Shearer's car." The limousine engined liquidly to the canopy, the white tires accenting the color of the streamlined chassis.

The white tires! Possibly Norma thought of the first $10 she earned in New York City, posing for an automobile tire advertisment, her head poked coyly through the tire that she was holding aloft.

She may have thought of all of these things, at the Carthay Circle première of "Marie Antoinette," because memory is kaleidoscopic, but more likely than not Norma thought principally of a charming person who loved her very deeply, the late Irving Thalberg. Like Vicki Lester, in "A Star Is Born," I imagine that Norma Shearer would have been twice as radiant if Thalberg had been there to squeeze her arm and say, "Honey, you were grand."

Good Morning!

KIND: Drawing room drama.

ACTING: FAR better than the story deserves.

DIRECTION: Ditto.

DIALOG: No.

STAGING, COSTUMES: Attractive.

SOUND, PHOTOGRAPHY, ETC.: Okey.

STORY: About how a catty first wife, who drives her husband to divorce, tries to make life miserable for the second Mrs. Holland—a sweet soul if ever there was one. [You know how AWFULLY that way Virginia Bruce CAN be—?] The lady succeeds in her aim, has the tables turned on her and, pouf!—just like that—turns out to be a pretty good sport after all.

AUDIENCE APPEAL: Has a certain amount for women, but for the boy friends—ouch!

See you tomorrow.

Wise Stylists Save Cash at Annual Sales

BY RHEA SEEGER.

You can rush to town to buy early all black outfits or crowd around the hundreds who are picking up the bargains featured in the annual summer sales. And you can saunter about the shops and stores and pick up midsummer costume accessories that go for a mere few bars of a song.

Summer handbags, designed with no special dating, can be yours for a few farthings and they'll be good for as many as three seasons if you select gay flowered or striped cottons or linens with embroidered designs for contrast. Or the pastel tinted pigskins with huge pale honey brown frames or the coarse, nubby linens with the same effective wood frames.

Bags for evening wear are slick finds right now. There are frilled organdy trifles. Other models include bags with the striped braid effect, the taffeta numbers, and a lot of shimmering satins in every imaginable color.

This also is a good time to shop for summer footgear carefully matched to sandals. Such a colorful duet revives any summer wardrobe and should take you through next and the next summer season with average care.

Huge scarves are amazingly low priced. These include the cabbage rose printed cottons, the airy woolens that are thinner than chiffon, and the rather unbelievably large silk and chiffon squares in brilliant color polka dotted with black dots the size of a penny. Other hanky finds are the very pale pastel thin linens with extra large initials in color a few shades darker than the color of the kerchief. The initials are in lovely flowing script style, with tiny rosebuds and flowers embroidered every half inch or so. The pale pinks and the greens are especially good.

If you crave good clinking costume jewelry—bracelets, necklaces, and matching clips—don't delay. The assortments are going fast. For modest sums you can get amusing or handsome decorative pieces in cool white, cooler white with green, and a lot of powdery pastels, as well as eye blinding combines of good exotic color.

Negro Hospital Safe for Babies and Mothers

A campaign to raise $500,000 as a five year operating fund for Provident hospital, Chicago's only all-Negro hospital, was launched yesterday at a luncheon of the Provident hospital development committee, followed by a tour of the institution. The hospital is at 426 East 51st street.

Graham Aldis is chairman, Dr. Franklin C. McLean, professor of physiology, University of Chicago, vice chairman. Others there were Dr. E. V. L. Brown, eye specialist, University of Chicago; Dr. F. W. Schultz of the pediatrics department of the university, and Claude A. Barnett, colored, president of the hospital.

Business and professional men included T. E. Donnelley, Russell Tyson, John A. Holabird, Kellogg Fairbank Jr., John B. Erskine, Newton C. Farr, Dwight Ingram, Wendell E. Green, colored, of the civil service commission, and others.

The spacious, well equipped hospital, its gleaming operating and delivery rooms, fathers' room, nursery, wards, pleasant private rooms decorated in pale pink or green, its dietetics laboratory, and scientific kitchens, aroused enthusiastic discussion among the visitors.

Looking through glass partitions, they were shown a healthy 3 months old baby, one of 16 in the nursery.

"She weighed two pounds when born," said a Provident-trained nurse. "We had no hope of saving her. Now she's fine. She could go home, but her parents and three other children live in one basement room. We just won't let her go home to that. Our social service department is trying to interest an agency in helping them get a better home."

This remarkable obstetrical department of Provident cared for 1,800 patients from January, 1933, to December, 1937, without the loss of a single mother from obstetrical causes. Dr. Pedro M. Santos, head of the department, who studied under Dr. Joseph B. De Lee of the University of Chicago, was asked to explain this unusual record.

"We will not allow doctors to keep their patients here if they do not do what we think is right," he said. "Of the 166 Cæsarian sections we performed in the last five years we've not had one death.

"We are operating under two handicaps, too," he said. "The lack of knowledge and education, and the low economic level of our mothers is one handicap. Also colored women, we have found in making 15,000 measurements, have thicker bones and smaller internal pelvic measurements than other races have. Their period of labor is much longer, normally being from 8 to 16 hours. The child's measurements are the same. This we have proved, and Dr. De Lee agrees with me."

In a nearby room was a pretty colored girl, whose physician husband in the south sent her to Provident. She owes her life and that of her robust baby to Dr. Santos, who ordered a Cæsarian or her removal from the hospital after 36 hours during which her doctor refused to operate.

Over 10,000 cases were handled in Provident's emergency room last year. Throughout the hospital, operating its X-ray and deep therapy machines, its Van Slyke machine for finding nitrogenous products in the blood, working over test tubes, planning special diets, doing all the surgical, medical, and nursing work, is an all-Negro staf. And Provident is the only hospital in the country where colored physicians can avail themselves of post-graduate study.

SYNOPSIS.

On board the S. S. Panama Queen, sailing from Los Angeles to New York, via Panama, are Anne Sydney, who has a part in a Broadway play, and her crippled and embittered sister, Mena. Arnold Vernon, rich English motion picture producer, and his coldly beautiful wife, Claire; Isobel Butler, who has a stateroom next to the Vernon suite and hopes to get in pictures through him; Alex Reed, young surgeon returning to work after two years' illness, and gossipy Mrs. Panting. Isobel meets and arouses Vernon's interest. She plans to flirt with Alex to allay suspicion. Anne and Alex are mutually attracted. Mena spitefully tells Alex that Anne is a heartless flirt. Pride causes Anne to hold herself aloof from him. At Acapulco, Mexico, Dr. Neil Andrews, a friend of Alex's, joins the ship. He wants to get married and thinks Anne meets his ideals. Alex persuades Mena to attend a masquerade party. Mrs. Vernon, dissatisfied with her marriage, attempts killing her husband by putting an overdose of veronal in his tea, but he fails to drink it.

INSTALMENT XVIII.

THE DOCTOR'S SECRET.

Isobel glanced through the smoke room windows and saw Arnold Vernon alone in there standing with a glass in his hand studying a picture map of the Spanish Main. It was the first opportunity she had had that day to tell him she wanted to talk to him.

She excused herself and went in and stood beside him. Isobel had a maternal impulse to put her arms around him when he turned to greet her and she saw the black despair in his face. Such bitter irony that this man who could influence happiness and success for others with one stroke of a pen, should endure something worse than the misery of loneliness—the tyranny and imprisonment of another.

She said—"why you don't look well, Mr. Vernon."

He brightened at her solicitude. "I don't feel well Isobel. The heat gets me."

"It's not so hot today. Come now, you can't deceive me. Something's upsetting you."

"Something's always upsetting me. So what about it?"

He looked round him in a nervous manner as if he expected to see his wife coming. "I'd like to talk to you my dear. But there isn't a place where we can be sure of privacy."

She knew what he meant. When Claire missed him she would go searching for him, and if she found him talking to that Isobel Butler there would be hell to pay.

"Yes there is. You can slip into my room so easily . . . it's right next door."

He looked dubious. "That would be very peaceful, but it might lead to a lot of trouble."

"How could it? No one need see you go in or out."

He made up his mind suddenly. The temptation to relax in the atmosphere of her warm sympathy was too much.

"Very well Isobel. Go down and wait. I'll come."

She went out of the smoke room the way she had come in, bent towards Alex and Mena as she passed them sitting on the deck. "I'm going below for a little while. See you later."

Mena's heart swelled when she saw Isobel disappear.

Alex was leaning back in his chair quietly smoking. Mena leaned forward silent, her fingers locked together, staring avidly at his face. It was the most exciting, most endearing face she had ever seen in her life. It was good-looking and yet rugged. A man who would never be afraid of anything—a man a girl could be proud of owning.

Alex turned as if he felt Mena's gaze and saw the way she was looking at him. A dull red spread over his cheek bones. "You see I was right. You really enjoyed yourself, Mena."

"I would always enjoy myself where you were," she said intensely.

Alex's voice was astringently matter-of-fact. "Very charming of you to say so. And now that I've shown you that people are only too anxious to have you join in their fun, I hope you'll remember it when you leave the ship."

She leaned nearer to him. "I can't bear to think of it. I can't bear to think of a time when I won't be able to see you any more."

He looked towards the dance floor and saw Anne swept into his range of vision in Neil's arms. He rose from his chair—"excuse me Mena, I must cut in on Anne." Reproached by her wounded look, he added—"I'll be back in a few minutes."

She smiled then and relaxed back into her chair to wait for him. He walked among the dancers and touched Neil on the shoulder.

Anne turned to his arms with happy relief. "Alex I've been wanting to talk to you. How can I thank you for making such a change in Mena?"

"I don't need any thanks."

"O, but I do thank you. If it hadn't been for you this trip would have been a complete fiasco."

The nearness of her went to his head again. He guided Anne to the dge of the dance floor and swept her off. "Let's go walking a little. What's all this gyrating to music for anyhow?"

Anne took his arm in her natural friendly way sending a shock through his body. "Yes Alex, do let's—"

Isobel emerged from a doorway. She looked white and frightened. She caught Alex by the arm and drew him away from Anne without ceremony. "Alex—you must help me. I'm in a terrible jam. Please come below a minute—"

Anne heard the husky urgent whisper but not the words. Alex turned to her. "So sorry Anne. We'll go for that walk when I come back."

She went down the after staircase to her state-room. She would wait there. She did not want Neil to take possession of her in the meantime. She wondered about Isobel. What could there be between she and Alex that she could come and take him away like that?

Isobel explained frantically to Alex on the way down in hoarse excited whispers. "He came to my cabin for a little talk—there's nothing in it you see—but he was blue and I was lonely. He was just sitting talking to me when he crumpled up. I thnk it's a heart attack."

Arnold Vernon was sitting up in the chair, desperately ill but conscious. He had a little box of pellets in his hand. "All over now," he muttered, "sorry to have given you all that trouble."

Alex lifted his wrist. The pulse was weak and fluttery. He said to Isobel—"help me get him into his own room and then go away. I'll get the ship's doctor. He must be taken care of at once. Mrs. Vernon's in the library—I saw her. Look if anyone's coming—"

Isobel looked out of the door. There was no one about. She opened the door of the adjoining suite and helped Alex support the patient. They lowered him gently on his bed. "Fine," said Alex, "I'm going right for the doctor."

Arnold caught Isobel's hand and kissed it. "You're so good, my dear. I wish you could stay and take care of me."

Isobel bent and kissed his forehead. Her eyes were wet. There was more in love than she had ever suspected. "I wish I could," she said sincerely.

She went back to her own room and waited there listening till she heard the bustle of the doctor arriving and the clipped tones of his commands to the nurse. She sighed with relief, replenished her make-up, smoothed her hair and changed her tiresome Chinese costume for more familiar things.

She saw Alex walking from the opposite direction when she went up the staircase and on to the deck. They halted as they met. "You'll never tell a soul Alex?"

"Of course not Isobel. I'm surprised you thought it necessary to ask me."

"Forgive me. I knew you wouldn't. That's why I came to you."

Beyond them Alex saw Mena waiting where he had left her when he went to dance with Anne. She was leaning forward out of her chair tense, watchful, trying to see what they were doing. Alex had a sensation of nausea, but he did not wish to undo the excellent work he had been doing. He said decisively—"It's your turn to do something for me, Isobel."

"Just give your orders, me Lord!"

"Stay by me till I turn in tonight. Even if you're made to feel you're not wanted—ignore it and stay."

She stared at him mystified. "I don't quite get the idea."

He said, "Don't try to Isobel. I need you, that's all. Please don't go and leave me."

Anne heard the last sentence.

Honey May Be Sweetener of Jams, Jellies

BY MARY MEADE.

[Copyright: 1938: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Making jams and jellies with honey instead of with sugar is a subject which interests many of our readers, our mail seems to indicate. We don't advise replacing all the sugar with honey, since an all-honey sweetened jam or jelly is likely to be somewhat gummy in texture, may be dark in color, and a little strong in flavor. However, very fine jams and jellies may be made with a half and half combination of honey and sugar.

When honey is used it is necessary to employ a large container for cooking the fruit, because honey has a tendency to foam and boil over. It sometimes is necessary to prolong the cooking somewhat, too, since honey is part water, and this excess water must be evaporated.

The procedure in making a honey and sugar jelly usually is like this: Boil fruit juice alone for 10 minutes; add sugar and bring again to the boiling point; add honey and cook until the sirup sheets from a spoon. Three-fourths cup sugar per cup of juice is the usual proportion for jellies. The same proportion of sweetening is added for honey jellies, half the sugar being replaced by honey.

TWO GOOD WAYS TO USE STALE BREAD: Cut the slices in strips and spread all over with a mixture of grated American cheese and butter. Roll the strips in poppy seeds and brown in a moderate oven. Wonderful with soups! Or toast the slices of bread on one side and spread the other side with butter and then with maple sirup. Sprinkle with cinnamon and place under broiling unit until bubbly and browned. This is a breakfast or teatime treat.

DO YOU KNOW that this meal is adequate in all respects—contains sufficient amounts of food nutrients and vitamins, and furnishes enough calories for a standard dinner: Orange juice, whole wheat bread, butter, peanuts, and dried figs? Notice that there's no cooking involved in such a menu. [But who'd want to live long on a diet like this?]

There's not much to making Dutch cream cookies. And you'll like them, I know.

Dutch Cream Cookies.
[Three Dozen Medium.]

½ cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg
¼ cup sour cream
¼ teaspoon soda
3 cups flour [approximately]
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg and beat well. Dissolve soda in cream and add. Add flour to make a dough stiff enough to pat into a long roll. Wrap in wax paper and chill over night. Slice thinly and bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes.

BOOKS

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"We Lived as Children," by Kathryn Hulme. [Knopf, $2.50.] Published Tuesday.

A novel that has the charm of a period piece is this story of childhood and adolescence in San Francisco in the early 1900s, with the earthquake vividly recorded and the subsequent jerrybuilding. The little family consisted of a mother, always gay in spite of trial and tribulation; a very feminine older sister, her brother, a younger sister, called Tom because she was a tomboy, and a "visiting" father.

Tom tells the story with nostalgia for happy years gone by. It is the story of their beautiful mother, who "wasn't like a parent in any way," because "she was one of us," and of their fabulous father, who bought them for birthdays and Christmases dresses made in France, bicycles, silver sets for their dressers, always everything "of the best"; who owned one of the first automobiles in San Francisco, in which he took them riding, but who did not give them enough money to live on except in crowded and not too happy neighborhoods and with cornmeal mush to eat when they wanted chicken.

The father and mother were divorced, and most of the plot in the book is the result of their estrangement. The children hope—through all his affairs, which he does not conceal from them, and even through another marriage—that their parents will be reunited, and their mother is tenderly pictured as hoping also. But a third marriage, which coincides with the boy's joining the navy and the older girl's engagement to an aviator in the world war, finally breaks the mesh of their joined lives.

Kathryn Hulme has re-created a period with tenderness and written of an emotional situation with subtlety in this simple, unimportant, but very pleasing tale.

Style More Worthy Than Subject Matter.

"Requiem for Idols," by Norah Lofts. [Knopf, $2.] Published Tuesday.

Norah Lofts, author of "I Met a Gypsy," has written another short novel in a style more distinguished than her subject matter. "Requiem for Idols" is also a nostalgic tale like "We Lived as Children," but it brings its remembered past into its recorded present.

The heroine, rich from her success as collaborator in writing popular songs in London and Hollywood, suddenly eager for solitude, sees an advertisment offering for sale the house in which she lived as a child. She buys the house on the spot, thinks it even more exactly what she wants in life than she had hoped, reconditions it, stafs it with a sour soul who had been her mother's maid, and then settles down to having her first guests.

They come—her collaborator and her two sisters—and in a few days the lives of three of the four are changed in their course. Her collaborator, a quadroon, hurls herself into a marriage. The ancient maid leaves in a tantrum. One sister confesses having done murder for pity and love. The other sister admits that she is terrified at old age, throws away all of her cosmetics, and is about to look old age squarely in the face when a chance for love comes and she runs into its outstretched arms. And the heroine, a few hours before wholly content to spend the rest of her life in her childhood home, changes her mind as the book closes.

"Requiem for Idols" has style the way a gunnysack would have style if Chanel cut and fit it, but the material in it is scarcely worth the artistry expended in its making.

Career Woman's Story Shows a Zest for Life.

"Woman About Town," by Allis McKay. [Macmillan, $2.50.]

"Woman About Town" is a story of the jaz age [midprohibition, not post-war variety]. It is about a career woman. It is about how love comes even to the disillusioned. It is cut to a pattern already shopworn. Having admitted that, the reader can settle down to enjoy the cliches done up in fresh, smart literary cellophane which crackles with wit, and sparkles with the turn of phrase, and makes alluring the too often handled plot which it covers.

The town is Chicago. The woman, a fashion artist who works in an advertising agency and draws anything from a cosmetic allure to alluring plumbing, knows a lot about makeup, in printed booklets as well as in faces, and TALKS like it. The trouble with most novels about career women is that their authors don't really know what their characters are talking about. Allis McKay has put into her characters' mouths the words and phrases which are heard in advertising agencies for shop talk and for social conversation in near north side studios and speakeasies in the year of her lady, 1929. Their hard boiled talk, in the case of her heroine and her friends, is a hard crust covering soft hearts.

"Woman About Town" has a real zest for life in its light pages and an excitement about our town which bursts into some of the pleasantest pæans of Chicago that we have read in many a day.

U. S. Consular Service Celebrated in a Novel.

"Parts Unknown," by Frances Parkinson Keyes. [Messner, $2.50.]

Frances Parkinson Keyes, successful author of a long list of popular novels dealing mostly with political themes, has chosen for her latest novel the career of a diplomat's wife, beginning in misery and ending in dazzling glory.

"Parts Unknown" is the story of Michael Trent, but it is more the story of Daphne, his wife, who married him because she loved him, although with deep misgivings about the advisability of undertaking life in "parts unknown" on $1,200 a year. She immediately became deathly sick as they started to their first post, but she never lost a certain iron-thewed courage, despite the death of her child after months of facing death herself in Peru, despite the terrors of a Chinese bombardment, despite even the apparent wrecking of her whole life when her husband chose a new career against her ideals.

"Parts Unknown" celebrates the consular service of the United States, not always without criticism, and it sings pæans to a brave woman.

Five of Robert Nathan's Delightful Short Novels.

"The Barly Fields," by Robert Nathan. [Knopf, $3.]

Five of Robert Nathan's short novels, written before his popular "One More Spring"—some of them many years before—are here gathered into one volume which somehow proves to be more than five times as great a treasure as one remembers any of the five separate tales being. Those five have added to their original joy by withstanding time. When we first read them we thought they were a joy, but they were so delicate, and time sweeps into oblivion so many remembered literary jobs that it is often a sad mistake to reread one's "favorite" books.

The five tales in "The Barly Fields" emit exactly the same delicate joy that they did in 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, and 1931, when "The Fiddler in Barly," "The Woodcutter's House," "The Bishop's Wife," "The Orchid," and "There Is Another Heaven" were published [respectively]. "The Barly Fields," incidentally, is the only form in which these novels may now be obtained.

Here's a Group for Those Lazy Summer Hours

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

"Summer Half," by Angela Thirkell. [Knopf, $2.50.]

"Though Young," by Leighton Barret. [Random, $2.]

"Heartbroken Melody," by Kathleen Norris. [Doubleday-Doran, $2.]

"Towers in the Mist," by Elizabeth Goudge. [Coward-McCann, $2.50.]

Here is a group of books to while away those lazy hours of summer afternoons in the country, the woods, or at the shore. Each is classified as light reading; none is sad or morbid.

"Summer Half" is a light, effervescent, humorous English story about a young man who takes a position as teacher in a boys' school to avoid being dependent on his father while he reads for the law. Young Colin Keith is a likable chap, and his tomboyish sister Lydia is a scream. He is pursued by a funny female with a bird brain and a habit of getting engaged. There are descriptions of life at the school and at Colin's own home that are as comic as they are entertaining. The whole book is as British as boiled tea and scones.

Humorous, too, are the prankish exploits of two little American boys, Bogy and Um Capricorn, as told in "Though Young," by Leighton Barret. The boys live in a drowsy southern town, and you see it vividly through the eyes of these youngsters. You learn all about the Broadenax family and its ramifications [their mother was a Broadenax], and about Aunt Ida Tarbine, and her house, and her disposition, and her pet enemy, who lives next door. There's a delicious flavor about this book, the taste and aroma and feel of a southern village.

"Heartbroken Melody" is another of Kathleen Norris' novels about a young American girl and her problems. This time her name is Honor Brownell, and she falls in love with her employer, a married man with two small sons. Honor's background is that of an old San Francisco family, quiet and conservative. The family members frown on Paul Cartwright even though they know he wants to marry Honor as soon as he can divorce his wife. The wife refuses to comply, however; Honor meets with a serious accident that cripples her, and the rest of the story deals with the aftermath and the new career she finally carves out for herself.

Elizabeth Goudge, whose "City of Bells" was so popular, has written another English story of the same type, though set in an earlier century, in "Towers in the Mist." Sixteenth century Oxford is the background for this new tale. There's a gentle charm about it, like the fragrance of lemon verbena. The author writes about Canon Leigh of Christ church and his eight children and their pets as if she knew each one personally. And there is young Faithful Crocker, the waif who found his way to Oxford town in the train of a band of gypsies and whose hunger for an education is great.

Faithful becomes a scholar at Christ college and a friend of Philip Sydney and Walter Raleigh of Oriel. Queen Elizabeth makes a visit to Oxford, and the last part of the book is colorful with the pageantry of the occasion.

A Graphic History of Northwest Territory.

In this cartographic history of the great Northwest Territory, D. E. Crouse vividly summarizes the political, economic, and social development that brought forth a modern civilization from a wilderness in the short space of a century and a half. The frequent plates graphically chart the development of the territory, and the text, packed with facts, provides a quick, substantial view of this important historical era.

Mr. Crouse recites the history of the Indian tribes, the pioneering of the early French and English, and the story of the sustained war waged by these peoples in the wilderness for colonial power. These wars, together with the balance of power held by the Iroquois Indians and the natural barriers offered by the Appalachian mountains, long delayed the development of the Northwest Territory, but, once such men as Clark, Boone, Putnam, and Zane had accomplished penetration, civilization as we know it followed quickly.

The history is concise, yet complete. It is of especial interest now because of the current observance of the Northwest Territory sesquicentennial.

Shrewdly Portrayed Characters in Novel.

"Secret Information," by Robert Hichens. [Doubleday-Doran, $2.50.]

The canon of an English village committed an indiscretion one day; he used a quotation from Frank Harris' autobiography in a sermon. The quotation was innocuous enough, but one of the canon's flock knew where it came from and decided the canon must have a guilty secret.

The parishioner was not content until he had pried the secret from the quavering canon. The secret was a locked cupboard wherein stood dozens of questionable volumes which the canon had smuggled into the country from the continent.

The canon's efforts to get rid of these books provide liverting reading, abounding in shrewd strokes of character portrayal. The climax comes when the canon dumps a book into the Thames and is caught by a policeman.

According to CULBERTSON

[Copyright: 1938: By Ely Culbertson.]

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: The time and place: A rainy afternoon at the club. The retired colonel is attacking, his objective a small slam. His flanks harried by two apparently unconquerable queens, he is calling up all the experience acquired in bridge battles to find a way to dislodge one of them. Suddenly inspiration comes. The present battle lines originally were as follows:

"East, dealer.

"Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♥ J 9 5
♦ 8 6 5 3

WEST
♠ Q 7 5 4
♦ 9 7 4

EAST
♠ None
♥ A K Q 10 8 7 6 2
♦ Q J 10

SOUTH
♠ J 10 9 8 6 3
♥ None
♦ A K 2
♣ A J 10 7

"East opened with a vulnerable call of four hearts. The colonel [South] bid four spades. West passed. North raised to five and the colonel, never having refused a slam invitation in his pugnacious career, went to six.

"West led the heart four and the colonel trumped. He led a small spade to the ace, just in case East held the lone queen, as East's bidding hinted he was short in spades. When East showed out it looked as though the spade and diamond queens would have to be conceded, but right there the colonel got his inspiration. He led a heart from dummy and ruffed. He then led the spade jack, whereupon West roared with laughter and taunted: 'No you don't, colonel! This lady will be around after the ace is dead and gone.'

"'Mr. Blank,' said the colonel distinctly, witheringly, 'I'll bet you the drinks your queen will not take a trick!'

"The wager was accepted and the battle was on. Four rounds of clubs were played, on the last of which dummy and East discarded hearts. The diamond ace and the king were cashed and then the trap was sprung. The colonel exited with his last diamond and East was in with the queen. East, of course, had to return a heart. Declarer ruffed with the spade ten and West was smothered. If he overruffed, dummy's ace would overruff him and declarer's jack would take the concluding trick. If he underruffed, dummy would let go the diamond and the spade ace would conclude the festivities.

"The colonel had won his bet. The spade queen had not taken a trick and the drinks were on West.

"Yours truly, K. L. D., Chicago."

My congratulations to the colonel are no less hearty merely because I think I remember this hand as one devised by my friend Sidney Lenz many years ago. It is one of the classic example of "smother play" and, of course, depends on a rather fortunate lay of cards. West, for example, must have four clubs and East must be the one that is thrown on lead with the third diamond. If West could take the lead he could return a low spade and thus avoid being smothered.

Nevertheless I appreciate the contribution and offer the hand as a highly interesting one, despite the cloud around its origin.

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

[Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Tribune Charities, Inc.]

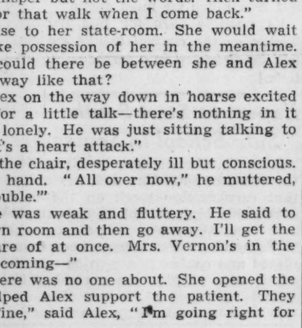
There were quite a number of 10 o'clock scholars this week! Yesterday morning the mailman brought in a good sized bundle of mail from boys and girls who wanted to come to our party at Wrigley field. I'm sorry, but you were a day late, boys and girls, the selections were made on Thursday, and the names of the winners will be printed in the SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

Those boys and girls who find their names in the list will receive personal invitations a bit later, and on Thursday, July 14, they'll see the Chicago Cubs play the Phillies.

Some of you wrote good letters, but won't be winners because you forgot to include either your full name, address or age.

However, those of you who were not successful in winning invitations will, I think, forget your disappointment when you see the good news I have for you, which you'll also find in the SUNDAY TRIBUNE. I'm announcing our next party. It's new and novel, and entertainment that I know you'll enjoy.

TODAY'S QUILT



Bow Ties.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

By NANCY CABOT.

There is nothing ancient about "Bow Ties" because those accessories are classified in the modern mode. The plan of the block is based on the old four patch pattern and only one patch, a right triangle, is used to make a square measuring 14 inches. When thirty of these blocks are set together, forming an all-over design, one can see a myriad of patterns scattered across the coverlet. A ten inch border around the quilt is finished with a half inch bias binding.

PATTERNS IN PATCHES

By CALEB

IN OUR Pageant of Old Peking are certain Mandarin gowns made with a technique that grew out of the Chinese sense of humor.

These gowns, made of fine silk, have designs and patterns sewed in careful order to the gown itself. This applique idea, we are told, is the product of a characteristic quirk of the oriental mind.

The story is that long ago the poor of China were not content to apply ordinary prosaic patches when coat and trousers grew thin with wear. Instead, they gave play to their imagination, and made a regular pattern of gay patches which they used in colorful profusion. Since a garment often remained in use until it literally fell apart, the result of this system was an elaborate pattern of patches.

So well did the scheme work that these costumes caught the royal eye, and before long the nation's rulers were equipped with gowns adorned (by design and not by necessity) with patches. Thus was born the now famous technique of Chinese applique.

The natural reaction of a Western mind to ragged clothes is the redoubling of efforts to get some better ones. No nation better exemplifies the endless urge and determination to do better than does this one of ours. That urge and determination are the marks that distinguish us from all others. They are a priceless heritage.

The moment we substitute for enterprise the tendency to bow before adversity as before the inevitable, then a birthright is offered for sale at shameful prices. Any theory or device that accepts adversity as necessity instead of facing it as an invader to be defeated and driven out, has no place in this country.

An American might conceive the idea of patching ragged coats in patterns—but if he did, he'd be apt to set out immediately to sell them at a profit. Then he'd get some friends together and start a factory. In the end he might well turn up with a fortune.

That sort of thing has been done in these United States again and again—and will be done tomorrow. It is an essential factor in the country's greatness.

U. S. AND BRITAIN PROPOSE SCHEME TO AID REFUGEES

Would Set Up Committee to Sit in London.

EVIAN-LES-BAINS, France, July 8.—(AP)—The United States and Great Britain were understood today to have reached a tentative agreement regarding a permanent international committee to assist refugees from Germany.

The Anglo-American plan, it was said in well informed quarters at the thirty-two nation intergovernmental refugee conference in session here, would provide:

1. That the headquarters of the organization would be in London.

2. That it remain free of close affiliation with existing refugee groups organized under auspices of the league of nations.

3. For an American head, providing Washington's permission could be obtained.

Propose Five Nation Committee.

The United States, Great Britain, France, Argentina, and Brazil would be represented on the permanent committee.

The possibility of creating branch offices in the various European capitals also was under consideration, especially in those where the refugee problem is serious or likely to become so.

Approval of the plan by the conference, which was called by President Roosevelt, would pave the way for possible negotiations with Germany to hasten and systematize emigration of German and Austrian Jews, it was said.

The delegates reported that German officials had tentatively offered to allow Austrian Jews to leave with 20 per cent of their goods as an inducement to speed up emigration for more than 50,000 planning to quit Austrian Germany before the end of the year if arrangements can be made.

James G. McDonald Mentioned.

James G. McDonald of New York, chairman of President Roosevelt's committee for refugees, was mentioned in committee circles as a possibility for director of the proposed London organization. McDonald from 1933-'35 was league of nations high commissioner for refugees from Germany.

The Anglo-American agreement on London as headquarters for the projected permanent organization was reported to have followed a declaration by French delegates that Paris was inadvisable.

The French were said to have expressed a desire to limit their government's participation in the committee's work because their financial outlay for German, Austrian, and Spanish refugees already was enormous.

ECKENER CALLS ICKES' HELIUM BAN 'POLITICS'

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, July 8.—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran German dirigible commander, said today that President Roosevelt will yet have a "last word" to say regarding the United States' ban on export of helium to Germany.

In an address during a celebration of the 100th birthday anniversary of Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin, father of lighter than air travel, Dr. Eckener ridiculed Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes for prohibiting the export of helium, a noninflammable gas Germany can get only from the United States.

"One cabinet member has suddenly given the opinion that the helium promised us last year has military importance and therefore cannot be delivered," Eckener said. "This seems like a joke, for military experts have denied its military importance. The last word, however, has not been spoken, as President Roosevelt has assured me.

'There is no doubt we shall get helium, because the refusal hits American airship interests, which are dependent upon collaboration with us. Peculiar maneuvers are common in America during election years."

MOVE TO OUST RELIEFERS WHO TURN DOWN JOBS

Trenton, N. J., July 8.—[Special.]—New Jersey's new unemployment relief commission started cracking down today on relief clients who shy away from real jobs. The commission ordered 1,637 persons to explain why they failed to report for WPA jobs.

State Senator Robert Hendrickson, Republican vice chairman of the commission, said that if legitimate excuses were not forthcoming the idlers would be removed from relief rolls.

Hendrickson's move for an investigation of the relief job situation was approved yesterday by the commission. Gov. A. Harry Moore has said he favored discontinuance of relief to persons who refuse jobs.

A suit for divorce was filed in Circuit court by Mrs. Georgia Post Forrester, 219 Lake Shore drive, against Dr. Claude R. G. Forrester, clinical professor of surgery at Loyola School of Medicine and a practicing physician with offices at 6 North Michigan avenue. The bill charged desertion on June 10, 1937. They were married in 1913.

Warn Against Another Outbreak of Paralysis

Officials of the board of health warned yesterday that July is the beginning of the season for infantile paralysis. All Chicagoans were urged to consult their physicians in every case of serious illness. Last year an outbreak of the disease, which reached its peak in September, delayed the opening of public and private schools for several weeks.

JUSTICE DOGS THE FOOTSTEPS OF A WANDERING PUP

Confound Confusion by a Nose.

Judge Edward B. Casey played a new rôle yesterday to see that justice was served. He wanted to find out who was the real owner of a police dog he had found injured a week ago at Sheridan road and Foster avenue. He did, to the enjoyment of all the folks in the neighborhood of the Foster avenue beach.

The dog was brought from an animal hospital in a taxicab to Lincoln park lawn at the foot of Foster avenue. Before a battery of newspaper cameras, the judge held the excited and nervous animal. A few feet away stood Seymour Goldfarb, 18 years old, 5113 Winthrop avenue, and Kenyon R. Bennett, 2300 South Michigan avenue, each of whom lost a dog of this description recently.

The Judge Uses Strategy.

"Now judge," said a photographer yelling above the shouts of the spectators, "let the dog go and we'll see whom it goes to." Judge Casey had decided on this strategy to determine the animal's master.

The dog ran into the crowd, trying to get away. He was brought back and then released again. This time he ran to a bystander, Mrs. Grace Moore, 832 Gunnison avenue. She was holding a toy beach bucket full of water. Maybe, it was suggested, the dog wanted a drink.

During all the confusion Bennett took another look at the animal. [On Thursday he had filed a petition in the Superior court for a writ of injunction to restrain Judge Casey from giving the dog to Goldfarb.] To his surprise he found that it had a deformed toe on its right rear foot.

"Say,' he cried in disappointment," this isn't my dog, Count von Richthofen."

Put on Show Again.

Goldfarb brightened, but the end was not yet. The photographers asked that the show be repeated. Judge Casey agreed.

So, for a finale, the judge again held the dog while Bennett and Goldfarb beckoned. Teddy [all were agreed by now that he was Goldfarb's dog of that name] raised his head, sniffed a moment, and trotted over to Goldfarb.

Wife Sues Loyola Surgeon for Separate Maintenance

Mrs. Francis R. Garvy of 1943 Farwell avenue, filed suit for separate maintenance yesterday in Superior court from Dr. A. Cosmas Garvy, clinical professor of surgery at Loyola university. It was the second suit filed by Mrs. Garvy. A similar decree was set aside in 1935 by the Illinois Appellate court. In her new bill Mrs. Garvy, who is 46 years old, charges cruelty. Dr. Garvy was recently appointed medical director of the state industrial commission. He lives at 6000 Sheridan road.

Loves Chickens More than His Wife; She Sues

Oliver Susemiehl of Oak Lawn breeds game cocks and cares more for them than he does for his wife, Ann. Her attorney, Norman Becker, made this explanation yesterday to Judge Philip J. Finnegan in Mrs. Susemiehl's suit for separate maintenance. Judge Finnegan ordered Susemiehl to pay $20 a week in temporary alimony to his wife, who lives at 6252 Stony Island avenue.

Parks to Give Instruction in How to Handle Boats

Instruction in canoeing, sailing, and rowing will be started Monday at the Fullerton avenue and Jackson park beaches. Any one able to swim is eligible to participate, according to Harry O'Hare, supervisor of park district beaches. Courses will be given later in other parks. The instruction is designed to reduce boating accidents.

Flood Detours Removed from Roads in Illinois

For week-end trafic the Chicago Motor club yesterday reported that there are no longer any detours in northern Illinois due to recent heavy rains.

DOES RELIEF FAIL OR DOES IT HELP? EXPERTS ANSWER

showed, leaves it to Mrs. Paige and other social workers to do just about as they please in the actual running of the district relief offices. They supervise themselves.

The social workers look upon themselves as professional people, such as doctors, lawyers, or dentists. The doctor's job is to cure the bodily ills of a family. The social worker says that it is his or her job to cure social problems of a family.

Problems Range Widely.

These problems may range from a drunken father to a delinquent child. The private social agencies, like the United Charities, the Jewish Charities, and others, specialize in this kind of work.

People are trained for this kind of work in schools of social service work. Most large universities include such schools. [The educational requirements for a CRA job will be discussed in more detail later.]

In the private agencies a great deal of time and money is spent on attempts to cure social problems. Joel D. Hunter, director of the United Charities, said his organization spent $73,000 in one month. Of this $45,000 was expended in buying food, shelter, and other needs. The other $23,000, or nearly one-third of the total, went for service expenses. Most of this was for salaries of social workers doing the service.

In the private agencies a social worker handles a maximum of forty cases. A case, to a social worker, is an individual or family being given relief or services. The social workers on the CRA staf must handle from 200 to 400 cases each. This will be cut down under a new law passed by the last special session of the legislature. Under its provisions the CRA will be able to hire more caseworkers [the social workers who handle the cases].

Way Opened for Cheating.

Most of the experts agreed that 150 cases are all that a CRA caseworker should have to care for. When they have more than that it is too easy for reliefers to cheat and the social worker cannot get around to those who really need help. But even with only 150 cases a social worker wouldn't have much time to devote to solving problems; at least, not if the worker spent time checking up on the eligibility and material needs of the reliefers.

Many of those interviewed said Mrs. Paige and her assistants insist that their already overburdened caseworkers try to do too much service work. Mrs. Paige, the survey showed, tries to fashion the CRA as near that of a private agency as she can.

The social workers reply that their service work is necessary. Without such work, they say, families cannot be rehabilitated and made ready again for a job. They will save money in the long run, they claim, if they take care of problems in the families now.

"What's the use of spending time and money on a man when the only cure for his social ills is an economic cure—a job?" asked one critic, who is a prominent social worker. "I used to think that service was all important and I still think it is important in its place. But it should not be a major part of the work of a public relief agency.

Decry Too Much Meddling.

"There is too much meddling in the affairs of the relief families. It would be wonderful if we could give everybody everything, but imagine how much it would cost. The first problem, it seems to me, is to feed, shelter, and clothe those in need. Let's go back and start over on just that basis. Then, after a good job of that has been done, we can see how much money we have left to do other things. But if we try to do the other things first we are going broke."

From all reports that could be gathered the social workers are and would be strongly opposed to placing the major emphasis of the CRA on investigation of need.

"They work on the theory that a man needs help until they can prove that he doesn't," one expert said. "Then they don't have time to prove that he doesn't. A man with a smooth tongue has a good chance of getting on the relief rolls.

Against Detective Work.

"It takes time and a knowledge of how to make an investigation to determine whether a man really needs help. In some cases the only way need can be determined is through social spying. The professional social workers do not believe in detective work. They prefer to trust their clients until proof is presented that the client is lying.

"This system may be all right in a private agency. But the spending of taxes is a different matter. The man should really need relief before he gets it. It is not a question of how much we have available for spending, but how much we must spend."

[A possible cure for this trouble, known as the central intake system, will be discussed in a forthcoming article.]

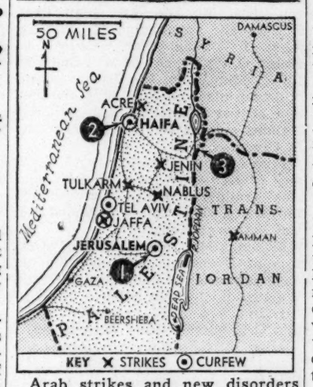
War in Holy Land



Arab strikes and new disorders marked the Jewish-Arab warfare in Palestine yesterday. Centers affected by the strikes and the British curfew law are indicated on the map (see key). In Jerusalem (1) three Jews and a schoolgirl were arrested after a bomb explosion killed four Arabs and wounded thirty-six. At Haifa (2) 600 British marines and sailors were landed and the British battleship Repulse dropped anchor. The Transjordan-Palestine frontier (3) was quiet following a battle between British troops and 600 Arabs Thursday.

GATE SALES ONLY TO RULE AT FIRE AND POLICE SHOW

First Come, First Served Decided as Policy.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Though the Chicago Fire and Police Thrill Show still is eight days away, fire and police stations in the city yesterday had received hundreds of calls for information on obtaining tickets.

The tickets will be on sale only at Soldiers' field on July 17, the day the thrill show is to be held. This was decided by the co-chairmen of the committee in charge, Police Commissioner James P. Allman, Fire Commissioner Michael J. Corrigan, and Evan Kelly, chief of the park district special service department.

Gates Will Open at 10 A. M.

Gates at the field will open at 10 a. m. and as the crowds increase additional ticket windows will be opened. There will be 70,000 seats available and the admission charge will be 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.

As the fire tower and other buildings that will be used in the show were nearing completion yesterday it became plain that each of the 70,000 seats will be a good one. In addition to the events that take place on or in front of the buildings there will be many in midfield and many on the track that circles the field.

During the afternoon firemen finished setting up the apparatus for the water fight, which will be the closing event of the show. Large balls, suspended from wires ten feet above the field, are to be controled by high pressure hose streams directed by the opposing sides.

Takes Real Marksmanship.

The team that succeeds in driving the ball to the other's goal will be the winner. Only the most expert hosemen in the department can qualify for this tricky sport.

Beginning Monday the 1,000 policemen and firemen who will take part in the show will begin daily rehearsals at Soldiers' field. The proceeds of the show, which is sponsored by the fire and police departments, the Chicago park district, and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be used in promoting a free show next year.

OUTLINE PURPOSE OF MILK INQUIRY TO GRAND JURORS

The federal grand jury yesterday was told of the department of justice's plan for an investigation of the Chicago milk industry which is expected to continue throughout the summer.

Michael L. Igoe, United States district attorney, and Leo F. Tierney, special assistant attorney general, outlined to the jury the purpose of the investigation, which is to determine whether any conspiracy in restraint of trade exists in the distribution of milk and its products from farmer to consumer.

Presentation of evidence will begin on July 18, when the first of a mass of records and letters subpenaed from trade and union organizations will be introduced. The department of justice has spent a year in preparing data for the jury.

Expect to Start South Side School in September

John C. Christensen, architect for the board of education, said yesterday that construction work on the new south side high school at 76th street and Bennett avenue will start early in September. Plans have been completed and contracts are to be awarded as soon as bids are opened. The school will cost $1,125,000. The entire sum is available in board funds.

REDS DEFEAT CUBS IN 10TH; SOX, TIGERS SPLIT

MYERS KNOCKS HOME RUN FOR 7 TO 6 VICTORY

Carleton Fails to Go One Inning.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Cubs made ninth inning heroes of themselves yesterday but even by going to sucn extremes they couldn't repair the damage done by their earlier misdeeds. Going into the last regulation inning five runs in arrears, they started a splurge which netted them the tying score and threw a ladies' day turnout of 27,256 into a panic. But in the tenth Larry French came in to assume charge of the pitching and Billy Myers promptly belted him for a left field home run which promoted Cincinnati's Reds to their first victory in seven starts. The score was 7 to 6.

Billy Myers.

What started the Cubs off in the wrong direction was a painfully weak act by Tex Carleton. He lasted long enough to pitch to three batters. The first of them tripled. The two others, Wally Berger and Ival Goodman, hit home runs. Later Berger hit another off Charley Root, good for two runs in the fourth. Still later the Rhinelanders nicked Jack Russell for a run. Meanwhile the Cubs encountered nothing but distress in their efforts to make headway against their No. 1 jinx—Paul Derringer.

Demaree Hits Homer.

The total damage to Derringer, barring a few harmless hits in eight innings, was Frank Demaree's third home run of the year in the seventh. But even with this performance, the Red giant didn't come close to finishing. Three successive hits, one of them a homer by Ken O'Dea before any one was out in the ninth, drove him from the scene.

Joe Cascarella was asked to assist but he misunderstood the orders. He assisted the wrong team. He was wild and finally had to be replaced with the two tying runs on the bases. Bucky Walters, the ex-Philly, subbed for the smiling Italian and Hack supplied the wallop that almost settled everything. He ripped off a triple to tie the score with only one out.

But Hack subsequently tried to carry home the winning run on a fly ball and he didn't get there, a happening which saved Walters from a defeat and which gave French his chance to come in and take the rap.

Reds Hate to See Carleton Quit.

Carleton's brief first inning act opened with a low pitch to Frey. The next one was bounced off the right field wall for a triple. Two pitches were enough to get a pair of strikes on Berger and the next was good enough for Berger to hammer into the left field seats, Frey preceding him across the plate. The count on Goodman was one and one when he

TUNNEY NAMED TO REFEREE C. Y. O. BOUTS WITH IRISH

Former Champion to Serve a Second Time.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Gene Tunney, retired undefeated heavyweight champion of the world, returns to Soliders' field Wednesday evening. Eleven years ago Tunney defeated Jack Dempsey in ten rounds in Soldiers' field in professional boxing's greatest money show. Now Tunney returns to donate his services as referee of several of the international amateur bouts Wednesday evening between the Catholic Youth Organization and the champions of Ireland.

This international show is the fourth C. Y. O. program arranged for the benefit of the C. Y. O. milk fund. And this is the second time Tunney has officiated. In 1935, when the C. Y. O. boys defeated New York in the first milk fund show, Tunney was the referee. Tunney's acceptance of the referee's task has met with unanimous approval of the visiting Irish officials. The judges and other referees will be named from the list of local men who are accredited by the A. A. U. and who have had long experience in intercity and international bouts.

Plenty of Welterweights.

The welterweight division is causing Paddy Kane and Dick Fitzpatrick, coaches of the Catholic Youth organization team, most concern. The coaches are not worrying whether they can find two good boxers to oppose Willie Moore and Tommy Byrne of Ireland. They are puzzled because they have so many good welterweights the choice will be difficult.

Tony Motisi is the C. Y. O. 147 pound champion. Savior Canadeo, a former champion, is another candidate in the group training at the Lewis Holy Name Technical school, Lockport, Ill. Then there's Jimmy O'Malley, Golden Gloves 147 pound champion, who also won the National Amateur Athletic union title in the tournament last April in Boston. Stanley Murczak, another splendid welterweight; Harry Sparrow, and Eugene Scruggs are other top ranking C. Y. O. boys. There are fourteen in this weight in the C. Y. O. training camp.

Byrne Is Good, Too.

Chicago might be conceded a sweep of the bouts in this weight class, one of which will count in the score that will determine international supremacy, except that Tommy Byrne, who is making his first trip to the United States, is one of the best on the invading team. Tommy is 25 years old, and he's been boxing ten years. Byrne won the Irish title in 1934 and 1935, and although he wasn't champion in the subsequent years he has defeated the boys who won that honor. Byrne is a great favorite in Ireland, and whenever he appears on a card it means a sellout.

In his international matches Byrne has fought against the best boys in Hungary, Wales, England, Denmark, Holland, France, Italy, and Norway. All the Irish boxers are well grounded in the fundamentals of boxing. They prefer to win by cleverness and science, but several of them also possess a real punch. Byrne is rated highly as a boxer, but when he finds an opening he can shoot a straight right hand as fast and as accurately as any. No matter who meets Tommy Byrne, whether it is Motisi, Canadeo, O'Malley, or another of the C. Y. O. boys, this will be one of the finest bouts of the international series.

Hearns a Veteran.

One of the veterans of the Irish team is Dick Hearns, who is the 175 pound champion. Back in 1933 Hearns came to Chicago as the 160 pound Irish champion, and he fought Fred Caserio in the second annual Golden Gloves international bouts. Caserio was awarded the decision after three closely fought rounds. Not only has Hearns represented Ireland in international competition, but, since he is a member of the Irish Garda, he has fought and won in the international police tournaments.

Ernie Smith, a teammate of Hearns and Frank Kerr on the 1933 team, also is back in Chicago. Like Hearns, Ernie also is a member of the Dublin police. He's 24 years of age and he has had forty international bouts.

Schmeling in Europe, and He's Still Suffering

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CHERBOURG, July 8.—Still suffering from the back injuries incurred in his fight with Joe Louis, Max Schmeling arrived in Cherbourg today aboard the Bremen. The German boxer said he would go directly to a hospital upon his arrival in Germany.

ENTRY FEES FOR 100 YARD SWIM PAID BY TRIBUNE

Boys and girls who wish to enter the ninth annual Chicagoland 100 yard free style swimming races may do so without paying any fee.

There never has been any registration fee charged by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., for the swimming races, Silver Skates competition, or Golden Gloves amateur boxing bouts. The swim meets are sanctioned by the Central association of the Amateur Athletic association. Last year, in accord with the policy instituted several years ago for novice boxers, the registration fee required for membership in the A. A. U. for the 100 yard swimming races was assumed by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Swimmers under 16 years of age are not required to register. Those 16 years of age and over must register with the A. A. U. on the day of their races, but the registration fee will be paid for the contestants.

Clip and Mail the Blank.

If you wish to compete this year all you need to do is clip the entry blank which appears daily in these columns and mail it. Report at the sectional you have chosen, register with the A. A. U., and compete. You will receive a souvenir button attesting that you can swim 100 yards. You may win a prize if you finish first in your first preliminary race, and if you are one of the 160 boys and girls who qualify for the championships at Diversey beach lagoon on July 31 you will receive a gold medal.

But your entry must be received before midnight July 18. And you must send your home address so the clerks in charge of the races can send you your acceptance card which will admit you to the pools without charge on the day of the prelimnaries. This card also will have your racing number, by which you will be identified when you are assigned to your preliminary race.

Team entries may be submitted in a group but the age of each contestant and his home address must be furnished by the coach or manager.

380 Awards to Be Given.

The Chicagoland swimming races were inaugurated in 1930 with the purpose of providing competition for all swimmers who wished to prove their ability to swim 100 yards. The list of prizes has been expanded from year to year until now 380 awards will be given to the swimmers in the sectional meets. Thirty medals and two team trophies are the prizes for the championships July 31.

You may compete in any sectional you wish. On Saturday, July 23, preliminaries will be held at Cermak pool, 7600 Ogden avenue, Lyons, Ill., and in the Sherman park pool, 52d street and Racine avenue. On Sunday, July 24, the meets will be held in Whealan pool, Milwaukee and Devon avenues, and in the California park pool, 3901 North California avenue. Permission has been granted by the Forest Preserve district and the Chicago Park district for use of these pools. Each sectional meet will start at 1 o'clock.

If you wish to practice, there are forty-two outdoor pools and six indoor pools located in the Chicago Park district and three pools in the Forest Preserve district. The Board of Education has opened twenty high school pools five days a week. Girls may use these pools two days each week and the boys have them the remainder of the time.

SUTTER UPSETS PARKER IN FOX VALLEY TENNIS

Neenah, Wis., July 8.—(AP)—Ernie Sutter of New Orleans battled through three sets today to score an upset victory over Frankie Parker, Davis cup player, in the quarter-final round of the fifteenth annual Fox River Valley tennis tournament. Sutter dropped the first set, 4-6, then won, 7-5, 6-4.

Others who gained the semi-final bracket with Sutter were Bobby Riggs of Chicago, national clay courts champion; Elwood Cooke of Portland, Ore., and Charles Hare of England.

Heel In Scores as Juveniles' Big Party Opens at Arlington

BY FRENCH LANE.

A big week-end of racing that engages 2 year olds was ushered in at Arlington Park yesterday with an upset when Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' bay colt, Heel In, won the Park Ridge purse at five and one-half furlongs. He forced the pace and later staged a furious drive down the stretch to get up to win by a length and a quarter from Our Chuckie, owned by the Bomar stable of Detroit, and Wafer, a filly from Valdina farm in Texas. The Texas filly had made the early pace, but started quitting on the turn.

The upset about the whole thing was the defeat of Royal Pam, owned by Johnson N. Camden. She was a 4 to 5 favorite.

Royal Pam had won the Bashford Manor stakes in Kentucky, and some Kentucky horsemen had rated her as the fleetest 2 year old they had gazed upon this year. In the Park Ridge she was outrun all the way and the best she could do was to finish fourth.

The Kentucky filly had no excuses. She was raced wide in the early stages and then could not keep pace with the leaders when the run down the stretch started.

Heel In, ridden by Alfred Robertson, paid $9.80 to win. He is a Futurity eligible.

Juveniles Head Program.

Swinging into the spirit of the big week-end for 2 year olds will be fifteen colts and fillies. They will strive for honors in the Hyde Park stakes, oldest turf fixture on the Chicago circuit.

Thomas Taggart's Yale o' Nine and Warren Wright's Beau James will muster the most support. They staged a nose and nose battle in the Joliet stakes which Yale o' Nine won recently at Lincoln Fields.

All Time High and Allegro, Dixiana stable juveniles that have swept all before them at Detroit this year, will not be overlooked. Until he was beaten on a muddy track a week ago All Time High loomed up as the fleetest juvenile in the country. The horse that beat him in the mud was his stable companion, Allegro.

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars has also come up with a strong entry for the Hyde Park in No Competition and Giles County.

Temulac Goes in Third.

Yale o' Nine promises to be the favorite, but not a short priced one. The odds should be 5 to 2. Beau James will be the second choice at 3 to 1. Last night the Dixiana entry was held at 5 to 1.

Also swinging into the big day of 2 year old activity will be Temulac, another Wright colorbearer. This son of Sir Gallahad III.-Marching Along, which cost $26,000 as a yearling, will have his coming out party in the five furlong race that comes third on the program. It is an event for juveniles who never have won a race. Reports have it that he has worked fast.

Temulac has been brought along slowly by Trainer Frank Kearns and is getting ready for the Arlington Futurity and a string of stakes to which he is eligible at Saratoga.

Arlington Pays Off on Horse Which Runs 8th

Due to a mistake by placing judges in reading the saddle cloth numbers, Martin Barton, No. 9, instead of Merry Pete, No. 5, was placed third in the eighth race at Arlington Park yesterday. The error was corrected and a new pool cast up after mutuel clerks had paid off for 10 minutes.

Show tickets on Martin Barton called for $8.60 and those on Lifelike, the winner, were worth $25.60. Those on Almac, the second horse, were worth $5.40. By the time the error was corrected virtually all Martin Barton tickets were redeemed.

With the recasting of the show pool that provided for a payoff on Merry Pete as the third horse, the corrected show prices were: Lifelike $21.20, Almac $4.80, and Merry Pete $3.80.

Upon discovery of the error, John Hertz, executive chairman of the Arlington Park Jocky club, ordered the payment on both show horses, Merry Pete and Martin Barton, was to stand. However, additional tickets presented on Martin Barton are void.

Mr. Hertz immediately ordered an investigation of the placing judge's error. "The mistake will be traced down and laid to the door of the official or officials who made the error," he said.

There was approximately $8,000 in the show pool and it was estimated the mistake cost the track as much as $1,000.

The placing judges at Arlington are Christopher J. Fitz Gerald Jr., son of the steward representing the Illinois racing commission; Emmett Hileman of New Orleans, and Sidney Brown of Chicago.

A Whitcombe at Last Wins British Open

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANDWICH, England, July 8.—Reginald Whitcombe, youngest member of the famous golfing Whitcombe family, today won the British open championship by scoring a 75 in the third round and a 78 in the fourth and final this afternoon for a total of 295.

Jim Adams of Scotland, runnerup to Alf Padgham in the 1936 tournament at Hoylake, was second with 297 and Henry Cotton, defending champion, third with 298.

Whitcombe's victory brought the British open title to the family for the first time. Ernest, who is 48, and Charles, 42, and Reginald, 40, have won almost every important golf tournament in the British empire, but until today their family had been deprived of a British open title.

STRATTON LOSES FIRST GAME, 7-5; WIN SECOND, 5-3

Appling Returns to Shortstop.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., July 8.—Luke Appling, who has been nursing a broken ankle since March 27, made his first appearance of the season at shortstop for the White Sox today and aided in a 5 to 3 victory over the Tigers in eleven innings, the first Chicago sucess here this year.

Luke Appling.

The return of their star shortstop and the happy outcome caused the White Sox to feel less chagrined at the result of the first game of the day's double-header, which Monty Stratton lost, 7 to 5, after enjoying leads of 3 to 0 and 5 to 2 in the first third of the game, all that Monty lasted.

Appling broke into the second game in the eighth inning after his understudy, Boze Berger, was removed for a pinch hitter while the Sox were tying the score against Cletus Poffenberger. In the last of the eighth Rudy York hit a tremendous triple to drive in a run and put the Tigers ahead. When he attempted to score a moment later on Pete Fox's grounder, Appling made a snappy pickup and accurate throw to retire the Tiger slugger at the plate.

Hits and Walks.

In his first time at bat in the tenth Appling drew a pass off Tommy Bridges, who followed Poffenberger on the mound, and singled to drive in the third run of the eleventh inning.

All of the six runs off Stratton in his brief stay in the first game were driven in by homers, one each by Dixie Walker, York, and Hank Greenberg. Frank Gabler gave up the unneeded run in the eighth after John Rigney had pitched four scoreless innings.

Thornton Lee pitched diligently for seven innings of the victory game in his efforts to win over the Tigers for the first time in his life. But the Sox foozled all scoring opportunities. He went away in the eighth for Larry Rosenthal, who batted in the tying run. Jack Knott pitched awhile and showed little. Rigney relieved Knott in the ninth and was the winning pitcher. He deserved the credit in view of his effective work in both games.

FIRST GAME

Hayes started the first game quite properly by socking one of Kennedy's offerings for a double to right. Hayes went to third while Steinbacher was reaching first on Gehringer's error. Kennedy, showing his old Sox temper, cast a wild pitch, Hayes scoring and Steinbacher reaching second. Kreevich was called out on strikes and Radcliff was thrown out by Kennedy, but Owen walked. Kuhel singled to left, Steinbacher scoring. The bases were loaded when Sewell walked. Berger had his bat on his shoulder when the third strike whizzed by.

Stratton banged a homer against the upper deck balustrade, atop the 365 foot mark, to lead off the second inning. The jog around the bases didn't improve Stratton's pitching in the Tigers' half of the second. Greenberg opened with a single to left. Fox fanned, but Dixie Walker drove a homer into the upper deck of the right field stand, scoring behind Greenberg.

The Scoring Continues.

Radcliff and Owen singled to center at the start of the third when the Sox scored two more runs. The runners advanced on Kuhel's tap to Kennedy. Sewell also tapped to Kennedy and Radcliff was run down, Kennedy to York to Ross. Berger singled to center, scoring Owen, and when the ball got past White, Sewell also scored.

The Tigers really bruised Stratton in the home third. White walked and, after Rogell bounced to Kuhel, Gehringer also walked. York smashed his No. 21 homer into the center field stand, scoring behind White and Gehringer. Greenberg followed with his No. 23 homer to put the Tigers ahead, 6 to 5.

The Tigers scored a run off Gabler, third Sox pitcher, in the eighth. Greenberg walked and Fox flied to Radcliff. Dixie Walker doubled to right, Greenberg stopping at third. Ross was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Lawson lined to Kreevich, Greenberg scoring.

SECOND GAME

The Tigers produced a run in their half of the second to get the scoring under way in the second game. York walked, the first pass off Thornton Lee in two games, and Greenberg beat out a bunt toward third. The runners advanced on Fox's sacrifice,

THAT SATISFYING LAST LAUGH—! O'TOOLE HAS IT

His Horse Finally Wins at Arlington.

Ex-Ald. Billy O'Toole had to wait quite a while to have the last laugh, but he was enjoying that laugh yesterday after the running of the sixth race at Arlington Park.

When his Blue Ridge farm horses lost race after race at Lincoln Fields and at Arlington all his acquaintances chided him. In the Wheeling purse yesterday O'Toole was represented by Wise Barrister. Hardly any one thought he had a chance, but Wise Barrister galloped to an easy victory and paid off at $37 for a $2 investment. There was great joy last night in the O'Toole turf camp.

Stormscud of Mrs. H. C. Phipps Wheatley stable and B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King, first and second, respectively, in the recent Kent handicap at Delaware Park are being pointed for their engagements in the $30,000 added Classic stakes, according to word received at Arlington yesterday. The same report also had Samuel D. Riddle's War Admiral, Greentree stable's Memory Book, and John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot preparing for the Arlington Gold cup.

Jocky Earl Steffen, Valdina farm rider who had several muscles in his chest and arm severed in an accident at Lincoln Fields, is galloping horses again and expects to resume riding soon at Arlington Park.

Warren Wright's Bull Lea, a candidate for the Classic stakes and Arlington cup, displayed a brilliant return to form after a vacation by working an impressive mile in 1:39 over the main track at Arlington yesterday.

The two most expensive yearlings of the 1937 Saratoga sales caught the eyes of early morning observers during the work period at Arlington yesterday. Gala Hour, for which Mrs. John Hertz paid $25,000, sped five furlongs in 1:00 2-5, breezing all the way. He seems ready to make his racing debut. Temulac, which Warren Wright purchased for top price of $26,000, breezed a half mile in :49 2-5.

STREET ARAB, away fast and always under strong riding, drew out into a good lead on the stretch turn, withstood the challenge of MY DAY in the final eighth and, ridden out, came away in the last sixteenth. MY DAY, also having speed from the start, was on the inside throughout, challenged with good response to punishment in the stretch, but weakened in the late stages. ROCEMUS, away slowly, worked her way up gradually and, through on the inside in the stretch, closed strongly.

B. Ott. Went to post at 2:46. At post 2¼ minutes. Start good from permanent stalls. Won driving, place same.

DISTILLATION, took command easily after a half mile, swerved out when entering the stretch, and weakened under brisk pressure in the final eighth but held DEAR ME safe. Latter, fractious at the post and away slowly, began to improve her position when racing wide on the turn, continued on the outside in the stretch and, closing well, was getting to the winner. DUSKY MAID moved up with a rush on the stretch turn, was under stronger urging the final three-sixteenths, and weakened under her impost in the late stages.

SUN MADRAS, sent into command gradually and taken to the inside on the turn, increased his advantage under vigorous urging when approaching the final eighth and, holding on well, was under brisk pressure in the final sixteenth. COUNSELLOR FAL, latter, allowed to drop far out of it and probably best, took much ground on the stretch turn, rallied stoutly when straightened out on the outside in the last three-sixteenths, and barely missed getting up. CHIEF NADI, a factor from the start, swerved slightly when making his bid in the drive and weakened in the closing strides.

HEEL IN forced the early pace under a light hold, took command slowly and held on with determination to the finish, OUR CHUCKIE, ready to take the post but not well, was under strong riding from the start, came to the outside in the stretch, and held on with good courage. WAFER had her speed, saved ground after the first eighth, and gave way very slowly in the final drive.

WISE BARRISTER, never far back, responded with good energy when called upon after about five-eighths opened up a commanding lead approaching the final eighth, but PIN MONEY, previously hidden out in jocky did not note that JOHN ONE, racing on the inside and about a neck back, was riderless. PIN MONEY took command easily, had the benefit of good rating, and while no match for the winner, held on well. SICKLE T., eased back slightly as the riderless JOHN ONE passed him on the turn, rallied when clear and stood a drive gamely to finish fastest.

Latter, reserved off the pace and raced wide the final three-eighths, responded when called upon, but weakened in the last sixteenth. PIRATES BEAT CARDS.

St. Louis, Mo., July 8.—(AP)—Young Bob Klinger exercised his jinx over the St. Louis Cardinals for the fourth time today as Pittsburgh slugged three Cardinal hurlers for a 6 to 2 victory. Klinger, product of the Cardinal farm system, kept the ten St. Louis hits well scattered and kept the Cards scoreless until the eighth.

RED SOX BUILD EARLY LEAD AND BEAT YANKS, 9-8

Boston, Mass., July 8.—(AP)—The New York Yankees spotted the Red Sox seven runs in the first three innings today, and then spent the rest of the afternoon in a futile attempt to catch up. The Sox took the game, 9 to 8, ending the Yanks' run of ten straight.

DICK TRACY—The Key Man

Reds Defeat Cubs, 7 to 6, in Ten Innings

For a few minutes after Root stepped into his rescue rôle it looked as though he was the wrong man for the job. McCormick thumped a two bagger down the left field line. Lombardi singled through short, but McCormick, making a slow start, had to stop at third. This made five hits in a row with none out, but there was no more clouting for the time being.

Berger Hits Second Home Run.

The boys kept Root going by spearing line drives in the second and third, so what happened in the fourth wasn't exactly a surprise. For the first out Hack grabbed a liner off Myers' bat. Derringer singled to left. Frey was written off on a fly to Marty. Root then pitched two wide ones to Berger and he apparently must have been too anxious about getting the next one over. Anyway, Berger knocked it over the left field wall for his second homer of the afternoon, making the count 5 to 0.

Russell, who took up the relief burden in the sixth, was blasted for a run in the seventh. He invited it by walking Goodman, who scored eventually on a single by Craft. Then in the home half of the seventh the Cubs really put it on. They scored their first run. It was Demaree's third homer of the season which floated into the street behind the left field barrier.

The rumpus which forced Derringer to resign in the ninth got under way on O'Dea's homer into the right field bleacher. Hartnett batted for Marty and singled to center, Asbell doing Gabby's running. Demaree hit the left field bricks for two bases, Asbell stopping at third and Derringer not stopping until he had reached the locker room.

Walters Is Called.

Cascarella filled the vacancy. Cavarretta slashed a sneaker down the first base line, but McCormick, reaching the ball with his glove hand, beat Cavarretta to the bag, Asbell scoring and Demaree going to third. Galan batted for Jurges and walked, Demaree meanwhile scoring on a wild pitch. Lazzeri batted for Russell and Cascarella walked him. Out went Cascarella.

Walters came in to halt the riot, but instead he met up with a triple to right center off Hack's bat. Bryant, who ran for Galan, and Lazzeri legged it home with the tieing runs. The Reds arranged for a double play by purposely passing Herman and Reynolds. Then they got the double play, but not in the way they expected. O'Dea flied short to Berger and Hack, knowing Berger's throwing skill is limited, tried to score with the winning run. But Berger happened to make an accurate peg and Hack was nailed.

Bryant to Face Bucky Walters and Reds Today

Clay Bryant will be in service for the Cubs today in the second of the series with the Reds in Wrigley field. He'll be opposed by Bucky Walters, the ex-Philly.

The Diz Dean case, which is growing funnier with age, is still in the hands of the doctor, so the $185,000 vacation which started May 4 will continue indefinitly. Diz has been told he can throw a little each day, but to quit the instant he feels any soreness in the shoulder muscle which is supposed to be in a damaged condition. The doctor will take another peek at the arm today.

Bill Lee and Johnny Vander Meer, the Reds' kid southpaw sensation, who were teammates during the All-Star game last Wednesday, will be enemies tomorrow. They've been nominated to handle the respective jobs in the final of the series.

Augie Galan, the Cubs' regular left fielder, who suffered a left knee injury in a collision with Pinky Whitney of the Phillies June 6, still is a long way from being able to work. The ailing knee refuses to loosen up.

RED TAPE HALTS HOUSING PROJECT TILL NEXT FALL

Need Two Years to Build S. Park Gardens.

Construction of the $10,000,000 South Park Gardens, federal housing project for colored families, may not start until November, it was learned yesterday. It will take approximately two years to complete the 35 acre group of apartments and houses which will accommodate about 1,600 families.

With the acquirement of all but six parcels of real estate needed for the site, officials of the United States Housing authority, which owns the land, the Chicago Housing authority, which expects to lease and operate it, are awaiting Gov. Horner's signature on the tax exemption bill passed by the recent special session of the legislature.

Much Red Tape to Be Cut.

The bill permits the Chicago Housing authority, in lieu of taxes, to pay local governments 5 per cent of the total rentals collected. Even after it is signed, one federal official said, much red tape must be cut and many delays will be encountered before building starts.

Sketches for the groups of buildings have been drawn by the architects, Shaw, Naess & Murphy, but working drawings, which will take at least four months to make, will not be started until authorized by the Chicago Housing authority. This authority will not be given until the CHA has leased the property from the U. S. Housing authority. A lease will not be consummated until Washington has approved the project plans by the CHA.

950 Apartments Planned.

The site for South Park Gardens is bounded by 37th street, South Park way, Pershing road, and Cottage Grove avenue. Tentative plans call for the erection of approximately 1,560 units, divided into 950 apartments in three and four story buildings which will front on South Park way, all the way from 37th street to Pershing road. Suites will range in size from three to six rooms.

The balance of the housing units will be in two story row houses, each unit occupying two floors. There will be about 610 of these homes. Separating the apartment group from the row houses will be Madden Park, a city recreation center started several years ago and recently improved.

ALDERMEN HEAR PLEA FOR FEWER TAVERNS IN CITY

A city council subcommittee began public hearings yesterday on the proposal to reduce to 7,500 the number of tavern licenses issued in Chicago. During the first six months this year 9,499 licenses were issued. More than 4,000 saloon keepers already have applied for permits for the last half.

Deputy City Collector George F. Lohman told the aldermen that competition now forces from 1,800 to 2,400 taverns out of business every six months.

In reply to complaints that a reduction in the number of licenses would deprive the city of fees, Attorney Charles Borden asserted that tavern keepers would pay a higher fee if they had fewer competitors. He represents the Illinois Tavern Keepers association.

Flora of Chicagoland

[False Solomon's Seal.]

July 8, 1938.

ONE plant that is quite common in the woods of Chicagoland and one that the outdoor fan is bound to notice at this season bears the unusual name of false Solomon's seal. The plant is tall, the leaves are long and graceful, and during the early part of June the false Solomon's seal grows an attractive group of flowers at the top of the plant stalk.

We have both the so-called false and the true Solomon's seal in the woods of the Tribune's Du Page county farm. It always has seemed rather fitting to us that the two species are usually found growing together, because they do look alike, as far as leaves and the stalks are concerned. But the true Solomon's seal produces its bell shaped flowers [usually in pairs] along the stem and under the leaves, whereas the false Solomon seal always grows its flowers at the top of the stalk.

Fruit Also a Guide.

This is an easy way to determine the difference between the two. One has only to see where the flowers develop and identification is easy. Later on the fruit on each stalk also is a guide. Flowers and fruit at the top mean the false variety of Solomon's seal. Flowers and fruit along the stem indicate the true Solomon's seal.

Whoever named these plants must have known his history and the story of Solomon. The common names for these plants were suggested by the marks on the fleshy bulbous rootstalks. They are marked with large round scars left by the growth and then the death of each year's stalk. For example, when this year's stalk dies in the fall it will leave a scar on the root. These scars resemble the impression of a crude six pointed seal. Since Solomon's seal was a six pointed star, the resemblance between it and the scars on the rootstalks was noted and the plant given its unusual name.

Member of Lily Family.

The false Solomon's seal belongs to the lily family. It sometimes is called wild spikenard or Solomon's zigzag. Because of the heavy rainfall this spring we are finding Solomon seal plants that are three feet high in the farm woods. They get some sunshine early in the season. Later they must grow in the shade—a factor that apparently means little to either variety, as both thrive under the cool, shady oaks. Now the flowering season is over and the fruit is starting to develop at the ends of the stems.

A.'s student secretary at Northwestern. During the world war he served in France as divisional secretary and had charge of Y. M. C. A. work with the army of occupation. J. R. HARKER DIES; EX-MINER AND COLLEGE'S HEAD

Jacksonville, Ill., July 8.—[Special.]—Joseph R. Harker, 85 years old, president emeritus of MacMurray College for Women, died at his home here this afternoon. He had been ill several weeks.

Dr. Harker rose from coal miner to college president. He came to America from England with his parents in 1872 and began work in the coal mines of Du Quoin, Perry county. He read the story of the lives of Gen. U. S. Grant and Horace Greeley, then rivals for the presidency of the United States. He read they had started life as poor boys.

Harker said to himself: "I have come to the land of opportunity. I, too, can rise." He purchased some school books. He finally qualified for a teachers' certificate. Under President Tanner of Illinois college he became principal of Whipple academy, a preparatory school, and while serving as principal there took the college course and was graduated with the class of 1888.

He was made president of the Illinois Woman's college, later MacMurray college, in 1893, when the college had less than $100,000 in buildings and equipment, and left it in 1925, thirty-two years later, with more than a million dollars' worth of property.

U. S. LAUNCHES QUIZ INTO ODD FALL OF AIRLINER

Billings, Mont., July 8.—[Special.]—Federal aviation experts were assembling here tonight to begin an inquiry into what apparently is one of the strangest accidents in airline history. It was the crash of a Northwest Airlines transport immediately after take-off from Billings airport earlier today. One woman passenger was killed, but nine other persons escaped with their lives.

Walter Bullock, pilot of plane. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

The airplane roared off the field, which is 3,565 feet above sea level, at 2:35 a. m. [Chicago time]. Immediately it began to waver and after reaching a height of 100 feet it commenced to mush earthward.

Skids to Edge of Canyon.

About 800 feet from the runway the tail and one wing tip dug into the ground and the wreckage of the 25,000 pound ship skidded along 200 yards farther to the rim of a deep canyon.

Mrs. Mary L. Mackie, 40 years old, 2122 Central Park avenue, Evanston, Ill., was killed. Her husband, N. S. Mackie, Chicago engineer and contractor, suffered a fractured shoulder. Another woman and seven men also in the plane escaped with cuts and bruises. Among the injured was Al Niemeyer, air commerce bureau inspector from Seattle who temporarily took charge of the inquiry.

Pilot Is Baffled.

The reason for the accident was a mystery. Pilot Walter Bullock, a veteran with fifteen years' experience, said he could not account for the failure of the ship to climb. He denied there was motor failure.

BOOKKEEPING HIDES DEFICIT, EXPERTS CLAIM

Loan Repayments Go for Expenses.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 8.—[Special.]—A new wrinkle in treasury bookkeeping just announced by the government will enable the administration, according to financial experts, to continue concealment of the true total of government expenditures and the actual amount of the deficit.

Up to date, by various bookkeeping devices, the administration has made the aggregate expenditures for the five years of its incumbency appear superficially to be nearly 2½ billion dollars less than the true amount. By the same means nearly 2½ billions were lopped from the aggregate deficit for the five year period.

Earlier Method Recalled.

Under the Hoover administration the transactions of the Reconstruction Finance corporation represented not a budgetary but a public debt operation. The funds borrowed by the corporation to finance loans to business enterprise hit by the depression increased the public debt and the repayments of loans were to decrease the debt.

At the beginning of the first fiscal year under the Roosevelt administration, however, all this was changed. The RFC was taken out of the public debt field and put into the budget. The repayments of RFC loans were not used to reduce the public debt, but were used to pay current expenses of the government. As one expert put it, this money "was burned up as fast as it came in."

Repayments Exceed Loans.

In 1934, the first Roosevelt fiscal year, the RFC paid out 585 millions and was included in the budgetary expenditures. But, beginning with the next year, the picture changed with the turn of the tide toward recovery. The RFC then began to receive more money in repayments than it paid out in loans. This excess of repayments over loans was 142 millions in 1935, 239 millions in 1936, and 334 millions in 1937.

In each case the repayments to the RFC were used to pay current government expenses and the excess of the repayments over loans was not added to but was deducted from the budgeted expenditures. As the experts explain it, the excess was spent in such manner as to finance an equivalent amount of expenditures not showing in the expenditures total.

Over Billion Concealed.

Altogether, by this bookkeeping treatment of the RFC, the Commodity Credit corporation, the Farm Credit administration and the Export Import bank finances, the administration in five years was able to conceal expenditures and deficit aggregating more than 1 billion dollars as follows:

1934	$ 52,392,666
1935	209,209,156
1936	400,273,015
1937	469,505,359
1938	17,126,436
Total	$1,148,506,632

By another device, that of failure to retire the public debt under the terms of the sinking fund law, the administration has been able to conceal the true deficit to the extent of an aggregate 1 billion 259 millions in five years. The sinking fund law prescribes the amount by which the public debt shall be reduced each year. The amount by which the administration has failed to comply with this law was 126 millions in 1934 and 1935 combined, 149 millions in 1936, 470 millions in 1937, and 514 millions in 1938, a total of 1 billion 259 millions.

Shadow of hand, representing two innovations in bookkeeping of the United States treasury, shows how aggregate deficit of the last five years, totaling more than 19 billion dollars, is announced as approximately 16⅞ billion.

More than 16 Billions.

The officially announced deficits during the five years of the Roosevelt régime were 3 billions 989 millions for 1934, 3 billions 575 millions for 1935, 4 billions 764 millions for 1936, 2 billions 811 millions for 1937, and 1 billion 525 millions for 1938, a total of 16 billions 664 millions.

By holding out of budget expenditures 1 billion 148½ millions in excess credits to revolving funds and keeping down debt retirement to the extent of 1 billion 259 millions the deficit was made to appear nearly 2 billion 408 millions less than it really was. Actually, therefore, the aggregate deficit for the five Roosevelt years was 19 billions 72 millions.

So long as the recovery tide was coming in the inclusion of the RFC

PWA WILL LEND ONLY IF UTILITY REFUSES OFFER

Washington, D. C., July 8.—(AP)—Administrator Ickes promised today that, in general, the Public Works Administration would not allot funds for municipal power projects which would compete with private utilities, unless the private companies had refused fair offers to purchase their property.

In a long awaited statement regarding PWA power policy, he said the agency's views were in accord with those expressed in the recent senate debate on PWA's new $1,000,000,000 fund. In that debate Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the administration leader, gave assurance that no funds provided by the then pending works-relief bill would be used to finance competitive power projects, unless private companies had rejected fair purchase offers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., July 8.—Renewal of the federal government's investigation of the oil industry was assured today with announcement by officials here and in Washington that five firms and ten individuals have been subpenaed to appear before a federal grand jury, to convene here next Tuesday.

Included in the list is Charles E. Arnott of New York City, vice president of Socony-Vacuum Oil company, who was characterized by government counsel as the "master mind" of a gasoline price fixing conspiracy that resulted in the conviction of sixteen companies and thirty of their officials last January.

Others Subpenaed.

Martin S. Peeters, Wadhams Oil company, Milwaukee; Joe Schmucke, Jackson Oil company, Jackson, Miss.; A. F. Richter, Phillips Petroleum company, Des Moines, Ia.; R. D. Collins, Phillips Petroleum company, Indianapolis, Ind.; Charles S. Smith, National Refining company, Cleveland, O.; Robert W. McDowell, Mid-Continent Petroleum corporation, Tulsa, Okla.; H. M. Twenty-four other defendants in the indictment joined in a nolo contendere plea, which was accepted on June 2 by Judge Patrick T. Stone, ing costs, for combining illegally to restrict jobber margins to the gasoline business in ten middle western states.

Judge Stone has set July 19 as the date on which he will announce his rulings on defense appeal motions for a new trial, to arrest judgment, and to set aside the verdict of the first trial, which found the forty-six defendants guilty of violating the Sherman anti-trust act.

June collections were $6,662,708, an increase over the $6,415,071 collected for May.

S. L. Nudelman, the governor's finance director, has predicted a deficit for the new fiscal year, citing a drop of more than $1,000,000 in June revenues, compared with the sales tax returns for June, 1937.

Cash eggs moved up ¼ to ½ cent to the highest levels since January. November butter eased ⅛ cent a pound to 26⅜ cents. Utility Votes Sale to TVA and Knoxville

New York, July 8.—(AP)—Stockholders of the National Power and Light company, a subsidiary of Electric Bond and Share company, today approved the sale of the electric properties of its controlled affiliate, Tennessee Public Service company, to the city of Knoxville, the Tennessee Valley authority, and the Appalachian Electric Power company.

A total consideration of $9,323,013 was involved, which would provide sufficient funds to pay 97½ per cent of par for the outstanding bonds and $70 a share for the preferred stock of Tennessee Public Service.

Cattanooga Bids for System.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 8.—(AP)—The Tennessee Electric Power company today was in receipt of a $6,200,000 offer from the Chattanooga electric power board for its distribution system and transmission lines.

The offer, contained in a letter signed by Acting Chairman L. J. Wilhoite, termed the proposal "a last effort toward acquisition of existing properties of the privately owned power plant here before duplicating the system."

Willkie Raps "Interference."

New York, July 8.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, in a statement today said the Chattanooga bid of $6,200,000 for the distribution and transmission lines of the Tennessee Electric Power company "is an unfortunate interference in the current negotiations" between Commonwealth and Southern and David E. Lilienthal, director of the TVA. Tennessee Electric Power is a Commonwealth subsidiary.

Willkie pointed out his negotiations with Lilienthal had in view the TVA purchase of the electric properties of the Commonwelth system "in a certain defined area, which includes Tennessee Electric Power company."

"Obviously," Willkie continued, "the Tennessee Electric Power company could not sell its property piecemeal without great loss to the security holders. Obviously, also, the Chattanooga board's threat of duplication of our properties creates a situation where pressure is placed upon us to negotiate for less than a fair price."

SEC TO CANVASS BROKERS' VIEWS ON REGULATION

Washington, D. C., July 8.—(AP)—The Securities and Exchange commission will send representatives throughout the country to canvass brokers' and dealers' opinions on the technique of regulating over the counter markets.

The commission announced today it has assigned this task to the over the counter section of its trading and exchange division. Under the new Maloney act, the commission is seeking to regulate security trading outside of national exchanges.

The law provides for the formation of associations of dealers trading in the over the counter markets. These associations would regulate the industry under the supervision of the commission.

HEAVY SELLING FORCES STOCKS TO GIVE GROUND

Feeble Rally Pares Losses at Close.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 8.—In a continuation of the heavy selling which got under way in the late stages of Thursday's session, stock market prices gave further ground today, although early losses of 1 to 3 points were somewhat pared at the close. Nevertheless, net declines included two point losses for some of the leaders, particularly in the industrial sector. The feeble improvement came mainly in the last hour.

Trading showed an appreciable decline from the preceding session, totaling only 1,566,670 shares today, compared with 2,775,420 shares yesterday. Trade was slow throughout the session, although there was a slight pickup on the rally.

Give Reasons for Reaction.

Several factors were held responsible for today's weakness, chief of which were that Friday was the customary day to even up accounts for the week-end, and apprehension over President Roosevelt's speech in Ohio.

Need for technical correction was another reason advanced. It was pointed out that the recent rise appeared to have been too rapid and to have discounted better prospective business than reports indicated.

Stocks hardest hit today were those which have been leaders in the recent booming markets. At the close losses of some of the leaders were as follows: Anaconda, 1⅜ points; United States Steel common, 2¼ points; Chrysler, 1¼ points; United States Rubber, 1½ points; General Motors, ¾ point; Kennecott, 2¼ points, and Bethlehem, 2⅛ points.

Copper Group Lower.

The copper division incurred similar losses. The drop of ¼ cent a pound for scrap copper depressed that group and reports of slower production in automobile production weighed heavily on the motors.

Abrupt declines appeared against carrier shares in the early trading, although a large part of the lost ground was retraced before the close. Power and light shares also dipped sharply in the first hour before turning higher.

Aviation issues were among the most active today and closed generally at lower prices. Oils closed fractionally lower, although Texas corporation gained ½ point. Heavy machinery and chemical shares followed the general trend, but losses were mostly fractionel.

STOCK EXCHANGE SEATS RISE; ONE SELLS FOR $80,000

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—The value of memberships on the New York Stock exchange, which has risen steadily since stock prices turned up eighteen days ago, touched $80,000 today, making a net gain of $29,000, or 57 per cent, in the last three weeks.

The long down swing in seat values while stocks were declining in the fall of 1937 and the first six months of this year was climaxed with two transfers at $51,000, a twenty year low.

The transfer today recorded a jump of $12,000 from the last membership sale.

EASTERN RAILS SET JULY 25 FOR BOOST IN FARES

New York, July 8.—(AP)—Passenger trafic agents of easter railroads, meeting today, set July 25 as the date on which the present basic fare rate of 2 cents a mile will be increased to 2½ cents.

The rate boost was recently granted in a decision of the interstate commerce commission. The higher rate will affect the region east of Chicago and St. Louis and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, as well as certain portions of Virginia and West Virginia.

Even Experts 'Miss Boat' as Stocks Sail

BY CHARLES KINTER.

Investors who "missed the boat" in the recent upswing of stock prices have one bit of consolation. Most leading investment advisory services also were left waiting at the dock, not to mention thousands of small scale traders.

A survey yesterday of advisory service comments just before the beginning of the upturn on June 20 showed that the experts generally were taken by surprise. A few services had forecast higher stock prices, but some of them were like a stopped clock, right at least twice a day, because they had been urging clients to buy during many months of declining markets.

Typical of comment just before the rise was the market discussion by Poor's Investment and Advisory Service June 18.

Here's One Forecast.

This service said, in part:

"The stock market is gradually working itself toward a point from which a sizeable move may develop. Direction cannot be predicted with certainty, although the economic background suggests the downside. . . . A further period of still narrower fluctuation and still lower volume is possible until a stalemate will have been reached."

Moody's Stock Survey, also foreseeing a further waiting period before much improvement could be expected, commented as follows on June 20:

"Business readjustments have proceeded sufficiently far to remove the obstacles to recovery, but the low level of capitalistic confidence has thus far inhibited the beginning of any cyclical upturn in business and the markets. . . . The natural forces of recovery [plus governmental efforts] will eventually prevail, but investors' patience may be tried by some further period of irregular markets. . . ."

Didn't Expect Recovery.

The June 17 market and business forecast edition of Fitch Revisions expressed the opinion that the "liquidation phase" of the downward market movement had been completed but that a further extension of dullness was in prospect.

"As dividends continue to dwindle and the stock market has little prospect of a substantial recovery in the immediate future, the advantages of relatively secure income investments for the present are evident," Fitch commented.

Standard Statistics' "Standard Outlook for the Security Markets" asserted on June 20 that "the general outlook is still obscure" and that investors "should continue to act cautiously and maintain cash reserves intact."

The "market laboratory" of Barron's financial weekly for June 20 cautiously admitted that a turn might be in prospect despite the fact that there were no indications.

Freight trafic rose to a new 1938 high mark of 588,864 cars in the week ended July 2, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. The gain over the preceding week amounted to 29,927 cars, of 5.4 per cent.

Total loadings, however, were 213,482 cars, or 26.6 per cent, less than in the corresponding week of last year.

Former Bank President Files Bankruptcy Petition

Herman Elenbogen, 4928 North St. Louis avenue, former president of the defunct Lawrence Avenue National bank, yesterday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court, listing liabilities of $1,019,024 and nominal assets of $303. Most of the liabilities, according to the petition filed by Attorney Sidney D. Missner, were incurred in connection with real estate building and management on the northwest side.

Grain Men Renew Struggle Over Old Price Regulation

The battle at the Chicago Board of Trade over the controversial "to arrive" or "call" rule was not settled by the overwhelming vote of members Thursday to retain the 42 year old regulation, Chicago grain men said yesterday.

Elevator men launched a new fight against the rule by presenting figures showing that the Cargill Grain company, expelled from the Board of Trade last March, has been taking a heavy volume of business away from members. The Cargill company was ousted after being found guilty by the exchange's directors of manipulating corn prices in the market "squeeze" last September.

Prices Governed by Rule.

The rule prevents members from offering more for grain in the country than the posted price during the trading session and more than the closing price after the session without giving members a chance to supply the grain. Minimum commission charges also are set. Elevator companies assert the Cargill company, which is not bound by rules, has an advantage in bidding for grain.

A central Illinois country elevator man yesterday furnished prices bid for cash grain at his station on July 6. The bids showed that the Cargill company offered ¾ cent a bushel more for cash corn than other buyers, as much as 3 cents a bushel more for No. 2 hard winter wheat, and ½ cent a bushel more for No. 2 white oats.

Estimate Cargill Purchases.

One group of elevator men estimated that the Cargill company purchased approximately 10,000,000 bushels of cash corn during the sixty days after the firm's expulsion from the Board of Trade, compared with 1,000,000 bushels in the preceding sixty days. Approximately one-third of the cash corn received in Chicago, it was estimated, has been consigned to Cargill.

Grain men asserted that Chicago grain handlers, faced with competition from the Cargill company, had been forced to send out bids through brokers in other markets for grain to be shipped to Chicago. Chicago is said to be the only market which has a "to arrive" or "call" rule.

INT. HARVESTER DENIES FEDERAL 'TRUST' CHARGE

Brands FTC Report 'Witch Burning.'

Sydney G. McAllister, president of the International Harvester company, yesterday declared that the company has been made a victim of "witch burning" by the federal trade commission. He referred to the commission's report on its two year investigation of the farm machinery industry. The commission charged that "a serious monopolistic situation" existed in the farm implement industry and singled out International Harvester as chief offender.

Sydney G. McAllister.

McAllister said the commission's full report has not yet been printed. He asserted that the principal comment to be made now is that the commission had denied the farm machinery industry a chance to give its side at the hearing.

Charges Digest Is Unjust.

"The report is very unjust to the harvester company," McAllister said, "Clearly it is shaped throughout as a witch-burning document in which the harvester company is the witch and the alleged crime is dominance.

"To prove this charge material facts and natural causes are repeatedly ignored. I believe the American public is interested in fair play and, above all, wants to hear both sides. Unfortunately the limits of a press statement at this time will only permit a comment on a few examples of the unfair method of attack."

McAllister first criticized the trade commission's statement on the harvester company's ability to make more profit in 1937 than in 1929. The commission said that the only reason the harvester company could do this was because free and open competition did not prevail in the industry.

Cites Increase in Costs.

"Every one knows," McAllister said, "that in 1937 prices for practically all manufactured products were higher than in 1936 and government statistics so indicate. And the public knows that costs affect prices in a competitive market and that there were very substantial increases in 1937 in the two principal elements of costs—labor and materials. The prices of the harvester company were not increased as much as the increase in cost and the margin of profit to sales was less in 1937 than in 1929.

"The unusual profits of 1937 resulted from the unusual banked up volume of sales to customers who had deferred purchases during the depression. This deferment was not the result of unreasonably high prices during the depression, as implied by the commission, for the commission itself finds that the industry operated at a heavy loss during the depression. Rather it was the result, as every one knows, of the unusually low prices of farm products, which destroyed the farmer's purchasing power."

Denies "Dominance" Charge.

McAllister challenged the commission's statement that "dominance" was shown by the increase in prices of many farm implements since the harvester company was formed thirty-six years ago. In answer he said the commission has facts collected by government bureaus from the pre-war period to date covering more than 400 manufactured products.

He asserted that a study of these facts shows that prices of most products made before the war have increased greatly as the result of increased labor and other costs. If the companies had not found ways to make their products cheaper and better, costs would have been even higher, he said. Mass production has helped cut costs. He declared that no one could study these reports without observing that farm implement prices have not followed any different course than prices of other things made before the war.

Analyzes Dissolution Case.

McAllister then discussed the commission's charge that the harvester company's "dominance" was caused also by the unsatisfactory result achieved in the company's dissolution case. In 1918 the department of justice issued an order requiring the harvester company to drop three of its five lines to competitors, McAllister said. This was done. The harvester company also was ordered to sell only through one dealer in a town.

McAllister pointed out that the harvester company had obeyed the government's own orders. Then he showed how other strong farm implement companies have entered the farm implement business.

"The harvester company is trying to conduct its business of supplying good machines to farmers in an honest way and at no greater profit to the stockholders than has been considered reasonable or is being earned in other competitive industries which are complimented for doing a good job," he said.

Cotton Acreage Is Reduced to Lowest Total Since 1900

Fewer than 27 million acres of cotton were under cultivation on July 1, the smallest acreage since 1900, the department of agriculture reported yesterday.

The 1938 acreage is 22 per cent smaller than last year, which produced a record cotton crop of 18,945,000 bales. The national acreage allotment for cotton for 1938 established by the Agricultural Adjustment administration under the new crop control act was 27,527,596.

The department said that the big cut in acreage this year was the result of the AAA program, the relatively low prices prevailing for cotton, and the difficulties encountered by planters in obtaining stands because of unfavorable weather.

No Productior Forecast.

The department made no production forecast. With normal acreage abandonment, a per acre yield equal to last year's would result in a crop this season of about 10 million bales. The 1937 yield was higher than normal.

The 1938 crop will be sold under a marketing quota. Growers will be subject to a penalty tax of 2 cents a pound on cotton sold in excess of allotted quotas.

Cotton prices advanced moderately in the principal markets after the release of the government acreage report. Futures closed 9.08 to 0.17 cent a pound above the preceding day. Cotton for immediate delivery advanced 0.12 to 0.15 cent a pound, closing at 9.22 cents in New Orleans and 9.17 cents in New York. At Houston and Galveston the closing spot price was 9 cents a pound.

Stocks, Bonds

New York Bonds.

New York, July 8.—[Special.]—Railroad bonds and active utility and industrial issues closed fractions to 2 points lower today as profit selling, increased by a slump in stocks, broke the upward trend which has prevailed almost continuously for the last three weeks.

Sales totaled only $7,661,350, face value, compared with Thursday's total of $12,443,050, the largest aggregate since late December.

Traders were encouraged by the fact that the downswing was held to small limits compared with the gains made during the three week climb. A flow of new buying, based on recent evidence that recovery movements are under way, tended also to counteract the profit selling, it was said.

Shattuck Denn.

Investors' Guide: I notice that Shattuck Denn Mining stock has been advancing a little lately. This stock had a tremendous rise in late 1936 and early 1937. How would you rate the stock now?—R. I. D.

Answer: You are quite right about the tremendous rise of Shattuck Denn stock in 1936 and early 1937, but you might also note that it took a tremendous fall later in 1937. After reaching a high of $28.25 a share in the spring, the stock sold as low as $3.50 during the October crash.

Operations have been profitable in only two of the twelve full years the company has been in business and net income in both of the two profitable years was small. The only dividend ever paid was a 25 cent disbursement last year, a payment not fully earned.

We regard the stock as quite speculative.

Late August Prices.

Investors' Guide: I have been wondering how present stock prices compare with prices just before the break last autumn. Please tell me the Aug. 31, 1937, prices for Western Union, General Motors, United States Steel, and Chrysler.—L. C. M.

Answer: Closing prices on Aug. 31, 1937, of the stocks you mention were $46.50 for Western Union, $109 for Chrysler, $54.25 for General Motors, and $108.37½ for United States Steel.

Standard Oil of California.

Investors' Guide: Please tell me the total amount of dividends paid by Standard Oil company of California in each of the last five years.—Miss D. S.

Answer: Dividend payments by Standard of California totaled $2 in 1937, $1.20 in 1936, $1 each in 1934 and 1935, and $1.25 in 1933. Payments so far this year total 70 cents.

WHEAT RALLIES; FLOUR SALES AID GRAIN FUTURES

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES

	Yest.	Thursday.	Yr. ago.
Wheat	$ .73	$ .72½	$1.23½
Corn	.59½	.59¼	1.14¾
Oats	.36¼	.36¼	.38½
Rye	.51⅞	.51⅞	.88
*Soy beans	.83¾	.83½	1.15

*October.

Wheat future prices turned upward yesterday after an early decline of about ½ cent a bushel. Prices rallied about 1½ cents from the low point on buying attributed to commission houses with eastern connections. Closing prices on the Chicago Board of Trade were ½ to ¾ cent higher. Reports indicated domestic purchases of more than 2,000,000 barrels of flour from southwestern mills had been made so far this week.

Winnipeg led the advance in North American wheat markets and closed 1⅛ to 2⅛ cents higher. Houses with Chicago connections and exporters were said to have been the best buyers in the Canadian market.

Liverpool Market Lower.

Unwanted rains fell at several points in the southwestern winter wheat belt yesterday where harvesting has been underway, but they had little effect on the Kansas City market where futures closed unchanged to ⅛ cent a bushel lower.

Export sales of 250,000 bushels of American hard winter were reported at the gulf, making more than 1,000,000 bushels disposed of so far this week.

Export Corn Demand Strong.

Export demand for cash corn continued strong. Sales were estimated at 750,000 bushels. Corn futures closed ¼ to ⅝ cents a bushel higher in Chicago on the old crop months. December was ⅜ cent lower on more favorable reports on the condition of the growing crop.

Price changes in oats, rye, and soy bean futures were largely confined to small fractions of a cent a bushel. Lard futures declined early in sympathy with securities, but rallied later to close 5 to 10 cents per 100 pounds higher.

Everyday Economics

More About Yardsticks.

From the standpoint of the bondholder, "times charges earned" probably is one of the most significant yardsticks that can be found. This shows the number of times a company is covering its interest requirements and other fixed obligations that must be paid in order to avoid trouble.

The more times charges are covered the better the position of the security holder is. A fixed income obligation usually is considered sound if charges have been covered between 2 and 3 times each year, on the average, over the last ten years.

The preferred stockholder is interested in the number of times charges and preferred dividends have been earned. The common stockholder also is interested in this yardstick because charges and preferred dividends must be paid before anything can be disbursed on the common stock.

HOGS AND FRESH PORK REACH NEW HIGHS OF SEASON

Hogs and fresh cuts of pork soared to new high price levels for the season under brisk competition yesterday. Top light loins sold wholesale at $23.50 per hundred pounds, or 50 cents above the previous high mark for 1938 and $1.50 higher than a week ago. Top hogs sold at $9.80, the highest since March 11.

The small available supply of cattle offered on the market yesterday sold at the highest price levels of the year, considering quality and weights.

Prices were strong in the market for slaughter sheep and lambs, with action the best of the week.

Slaughtering of hogs in packing plants under federal inspection last month was the second largest for June in four years. During the month these plants killed 2,533,468, a decline of 51,255 from the May total, but an increase of 423,651 compared with a year ago.

Packing plants handled 815,786 cattle during the month, the largest total since January. It was however, the smallest June slaughter in three years, comparing with 839,568 a year ago and with 853,188 two years ago. Sheep numbered 1,485,386, the second largest month's total of the year, and the largest June total since 1933.
